FOG

Old Glory whips the breeze, as it is lowered at the close of the school day by cheerleaders Yako Ito and Charlene Hord.

Stormy days dampen spirits and dresses as Linda Anderson and Brenda Hill scurry across the glistening sidewalk to classes.

1962-1963 . . . our

As the 1962-63 year unfolds at Claremont Central High School, a panorama of sunshine and shadows, light and dark, highs and lows, good and bad is reflected in the lives of H.H.S. students, faculty, and administrators. Each day brings its own moods—anxiety over being accepted, anticipation of a coming event; fear of not making the grade, gratification over each encouragement.

Adjusting to crowded classrooms, packed auditorium assemblies, and jammed halls, when six hundred sophomores swelled our number to eleven hundred eighty; looking ahead to the completion of new classroom facilities; enjoying the social aspects of H.H.S. through the Junior-Senior, Homecoming festivities, and Twirp Dance; cheering when our track team won the state championship; being disappointed with our football record, and that shadow fading as our basketball team was spotlighted; plunging into semester exams with trepidation, an emerging with the exhilaration of achievement are only a few of the variety of experiences which the year unveils.

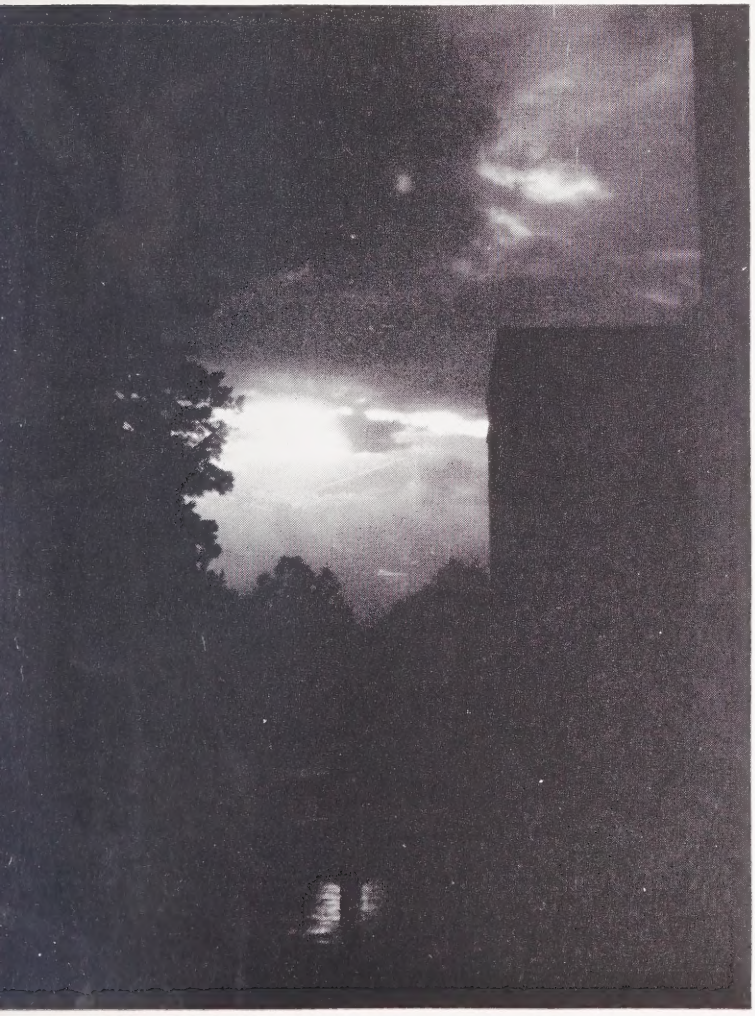

As the days progress, somehow the tensions and pressures are endured, teaching the student body of H.H.S. to meet life maturely and successfully and to go through the shadows, emerging into the promising sun.

Sunny autumn skys brighten the colorful front campus and the possibilities of interesting after school activities, as students hasten away after the 3:30 bell.

Promise of a storm brings gathering clouds, forming shadows and an opportunity for a picture memory of Claremont Central High School

Bringing

October brought the first signs of the new classroom expansion. Trees fell, bulldozers leveled, and soon concrete supports were being poured. A heavy influx of sophomores necessitated the addition of another classroom building.

Crowded Classrooms and New Construction . . .

It looks like a snake dance! Patient lines of student typify a rainy day schedule in the lunchroom.

Immediate need for additional classroom space has necessitated the installation of two temporary mobile units for Distributive Education courses and study halls.

Seniors, two hundred eighty-seven strong, swarm away from the school on their way to hear Governor Sanford's speech on the need of education.

Despite the cold, the student section is packed. As Lenoir scores a touchdown, some jump to see how it could have happened, while others show their anxiety by chewing their mittens.

Pleasures and Disappointments . . .

Enjoying the open lunch period, Judy Hendrix, Judy Young, Rolaine Vandenburg, and Jill Frye eat off campus; then find the grove a convenient place to chat.

Crowds of students congregate on the auditorium steps to enjoy an impromptu side-show put on by Sub-Junior initiates, whose ridiculous costumes are being inspected.

After cheering the team in hope of a victory, tears and a set smile seem the easiest ways for Yako Ito and Linda Hamilton to accept a defeat.

Typical of "courting couples," Charlene Hord and Johnny Bason linger for a few more moments, before making a mad dash to fourth period.

Even the H.H.S. campus is given a Christmas gift. Looking serenely beautiful on Christmas morning, the oaks are glazed with ice lace.

At lunchtime, the steps to the library building are the natural place for students to meet friends, to exchange the latest gossip, and to grab a moment of last minute study.

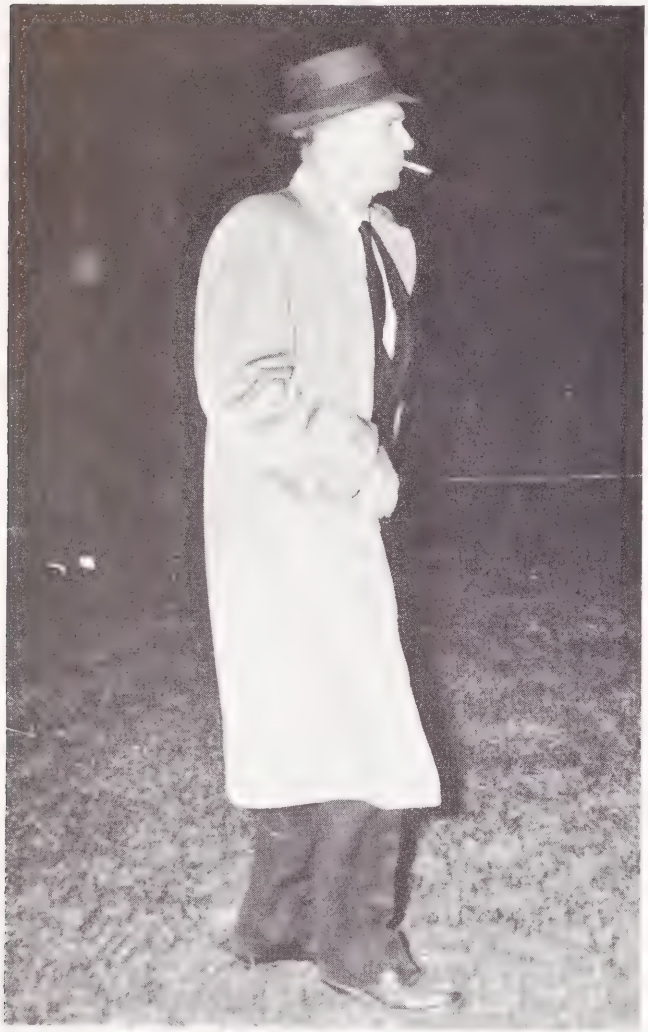

A Complex of Routines and Highlights

"Do you really think it is in there?" asks Steve Lail, as Dianne Johnson looks hopeful. "No such luck," shrugs Donnie Westmoreland. "The bomb scare will be over soon and we will have to go back to six weeks tests again."

Always a friend to students, Mr. Washam develops close associations with pupils through three classes of boys' health.

As a coach, Troy Washam feels the tense uncertainty of a football game, while, from the sidelines, he awaits the results of an official measurement.

Dedication

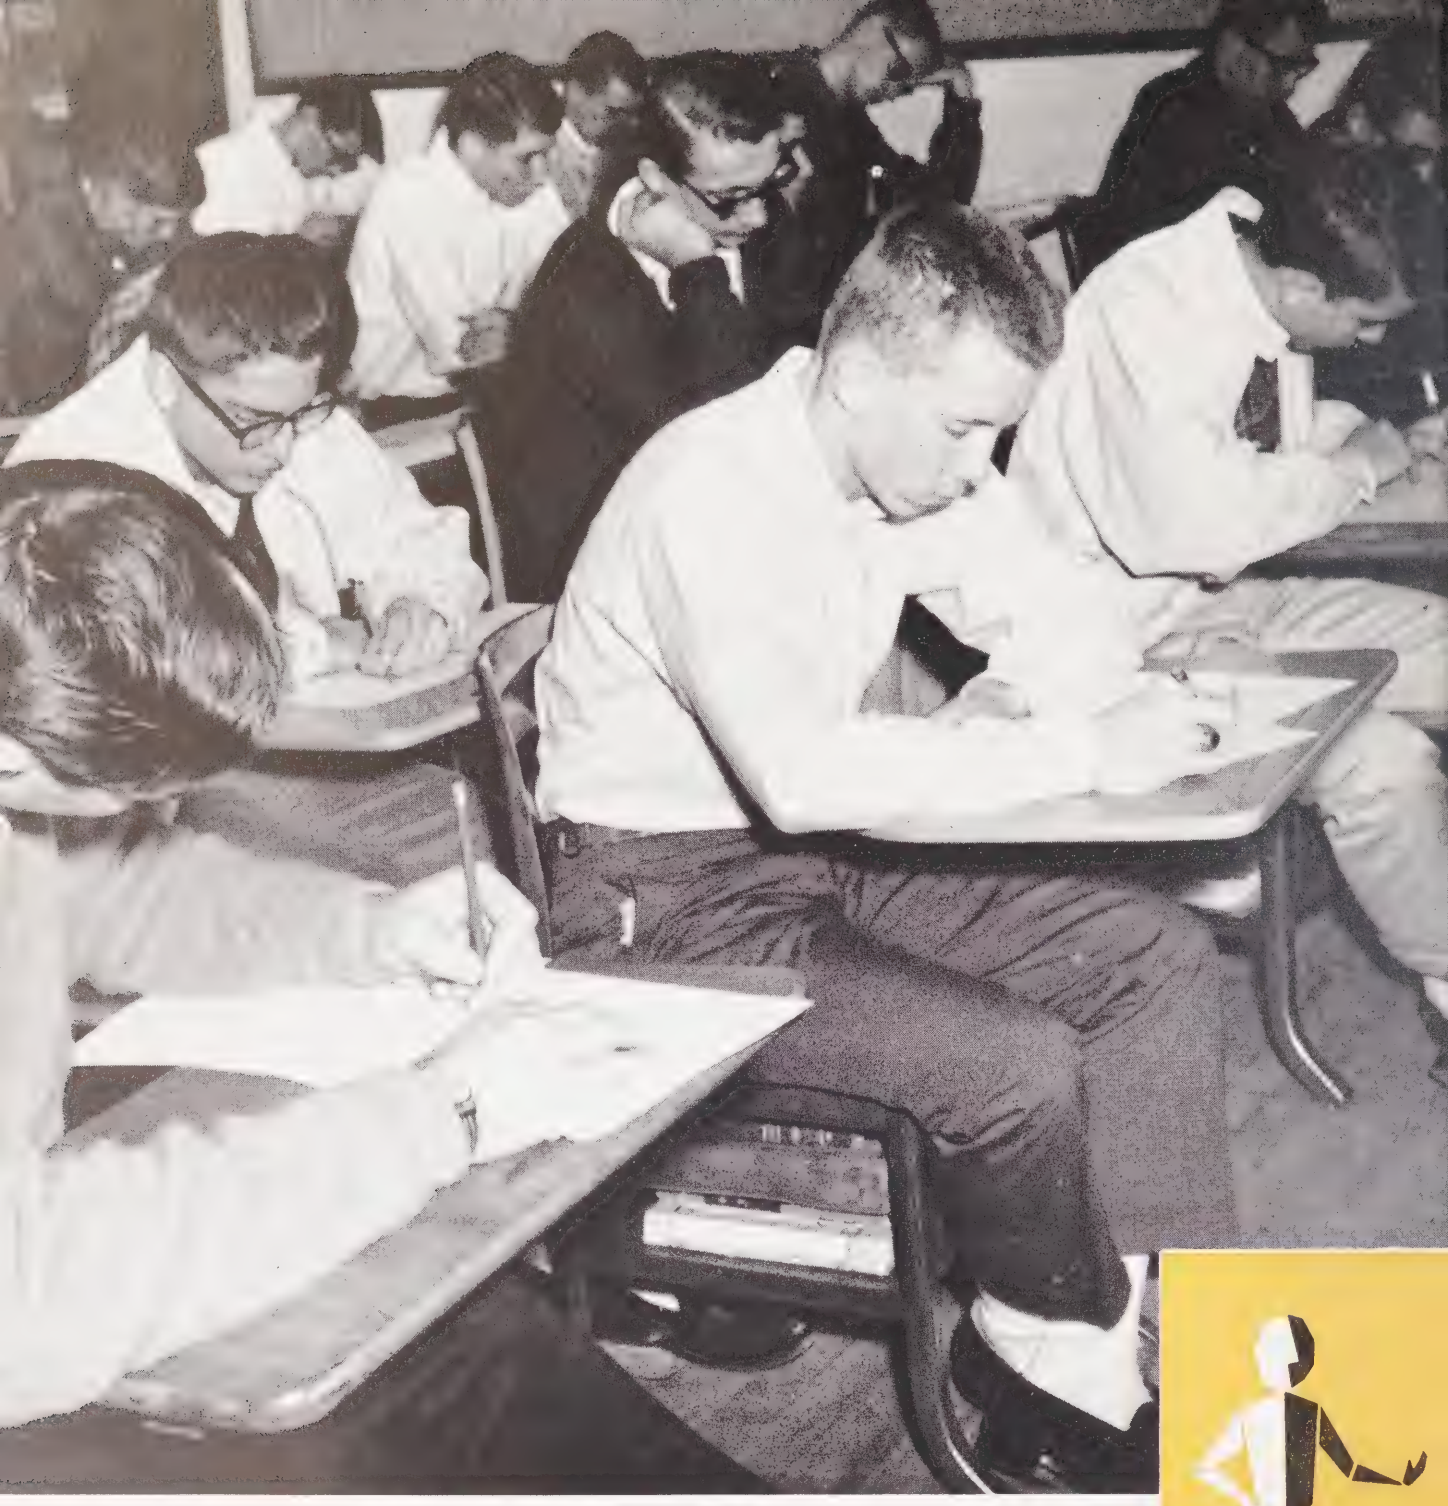

Meeting the demands of a position with manifold responsibilities, his many faceted personality projects to all at Claremont Central High School. Remaining calm and collected during an exacting schedule of daily activities, his character commands the respect and admiration of students and faculty.

Promoting high standards and good sportsmanship through his coaching of the football and baseball teams; encouraging physical fitness through his classes of boys' health; determining the basis of students' absences with clear judgment; patiently steering students through the Driver's Training program; planning for the safety of the school in case of nuclear attack; solving the problems of broken down buses; substitute drivers, and monthly bus reports; implementing the policies set forth by the office of the principal; he still finds time to offer help and advice whenever it is needed.

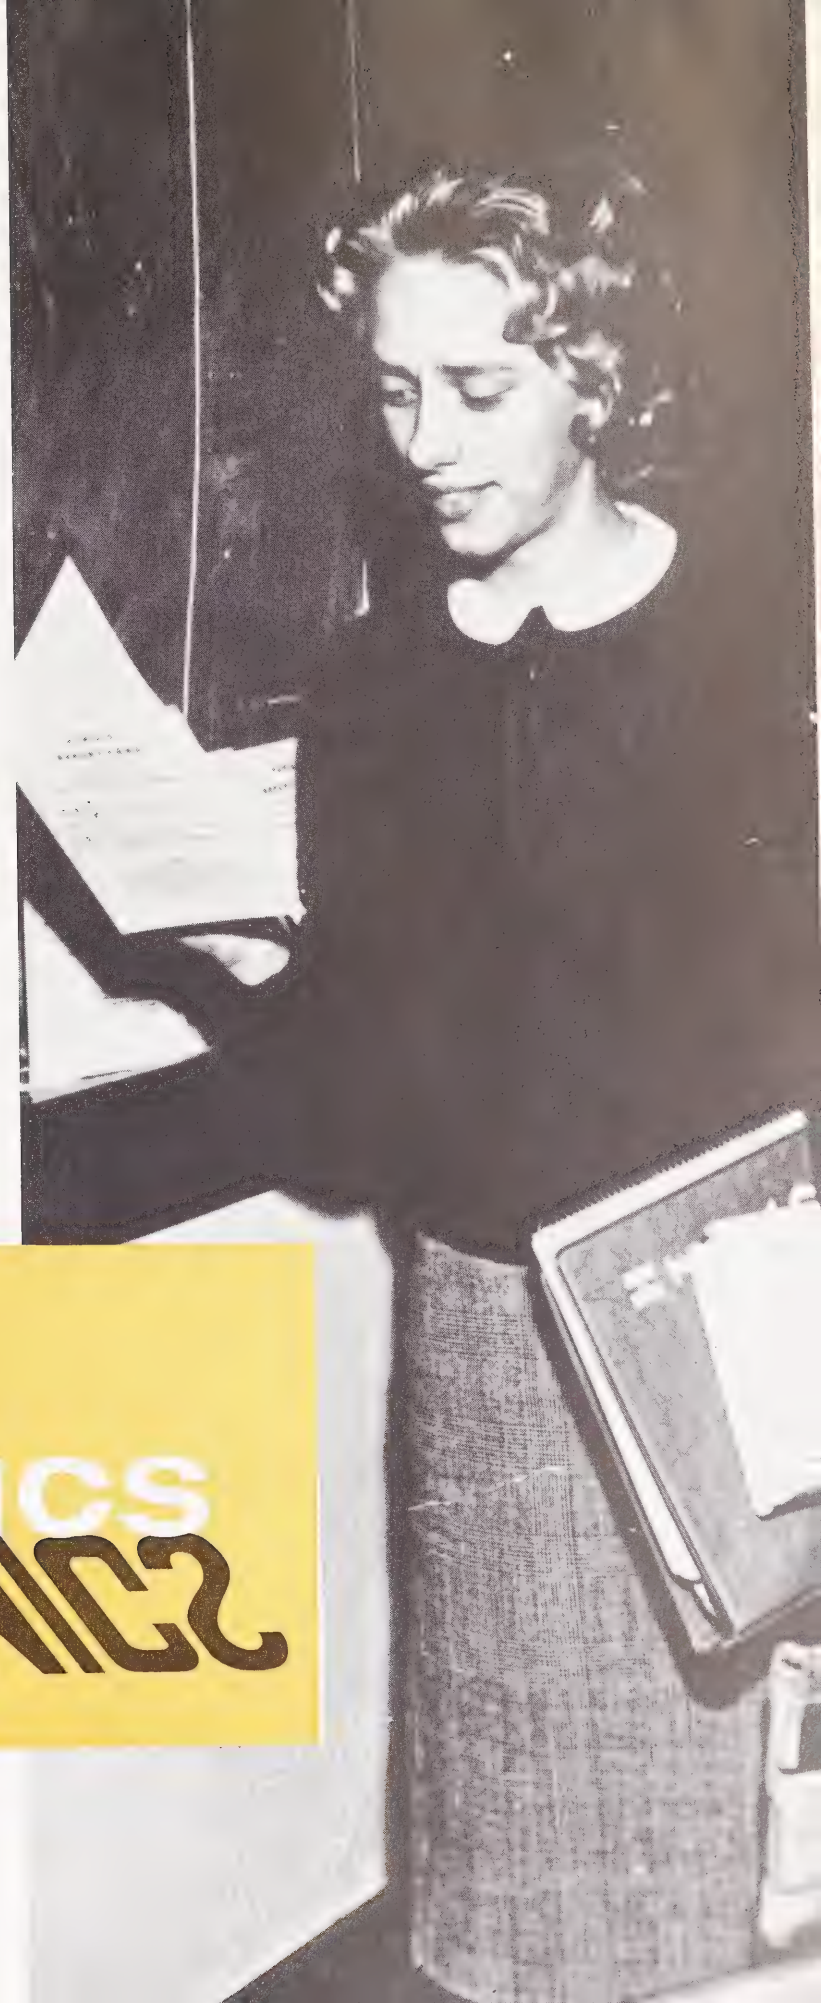

Because of his patience, cooperation, and understanding; his genuine interest in each student; his sincere effort to make of us better citizens; his wonderful sense of humor; his devotion to Christian ideals; his immeasurable contributions and untiring help at all times, which are such a vital part of our school life, we proudly dedicate this 1963 HICKORY LOG to you, our assistant principal and friend, Mr. Troy Washam.

ACADEMICS

As superintendent of schools in a progressive system, Dr. Jenkins reads to keep abreast of the times in an ever changing world.

With three quick authoritative taps of the gavel, another monthly meeting of the Hickory school board is brought to order. This group of eight men form the nucleus around which the entire Hickory school system revolves. In their capable hands rests the responsibility of supervising all of the institutions of the town.

During the summer months these men continue to meet monthly, planning each minute detail of the following school session. Their duties include hiring teachers, setting holiday dates, and drawing up the over-all curriculum for the year. While school is in session, their activities expand to consider project proposals and adoptions, and to retain over-all supervision of legislation and jurisdiction required of a school governing body.

The first Tuesday of each month finds the school board conducting the items of business at its regular meeting.

Seniors Martha Pitts and Bill Hall wait for news of College Board scores from guidance counselors Mrs. Kathryn Havnaer, Mrs. Elizabeth Reese, and Dr. Clyde Taylor, school psychologist.

Correlating the ever expanding facilities, enrollment, and academic program, Mr. W. D. Cottrell keeps H.H.S. in the vanguard of modern education.

Only a part of the duties that compose his schedule as assistant principal, Mr. Troy Washam fills out the monthly bus report.

Administration and Faculty

Patient, Understanding, Co-operative, and Congenial . . .

Informal activities show that teachers aren't just found in the classroom, and a piece of chalk doesn't grow in their hands. Sharing in sports, clubs, and dances, the faculty and students are bound more closely; the other sides of teacher personalities are shown to their students.

Mrs. Jane Turner combines work with pleasure by assisting the athletic department in collecting admission fees at a weekly football game.

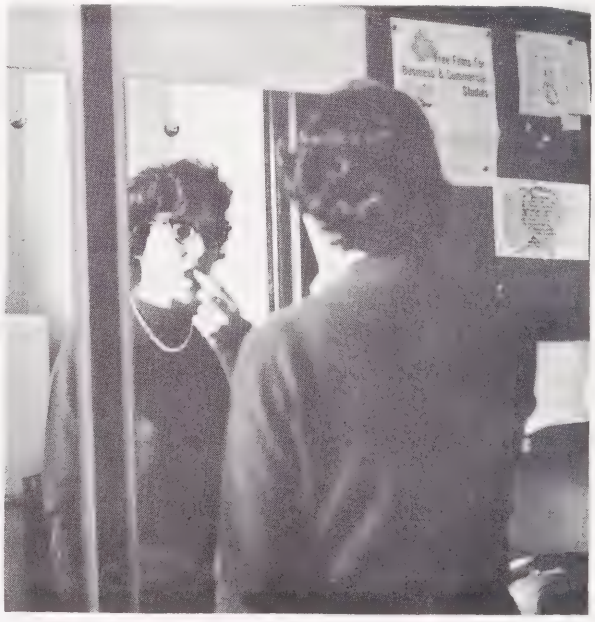

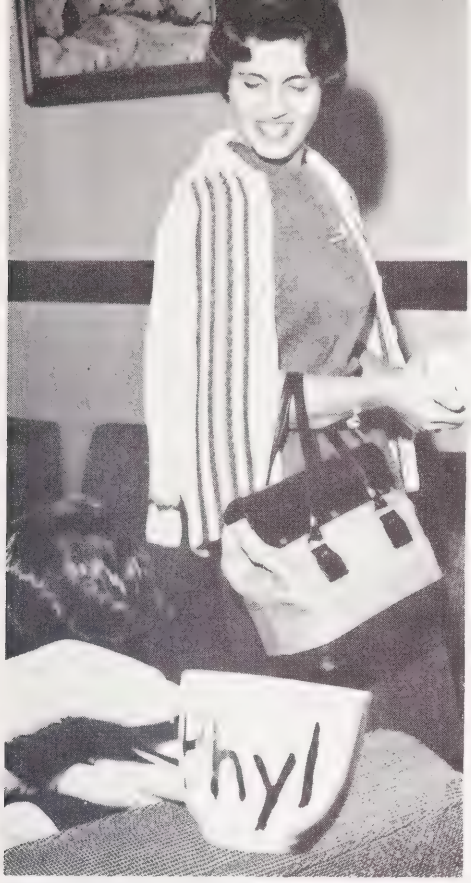

Mr. Rankin beautifully illustrates the art of creating life-like images by painting a uniquely realistic portrait of his daughter.

H.H.S. Personnel Look Out

The teachers' lounge serves as a makeshift Paris salon for Mrs. McCathern as she prepares to face her French I class.

Mrs. Lael finds refuge from the hum of students when she retires to the teachers' lounge during the lunch hour.

The lunchroom brigade made up of Josephine James, Gladys Crawley, and Bessie Suddereth hurriedly man their posts before the deluge of famished students invade the cafeteria.

From her vantage point atop her desk, Mrs. Havnaer encourages her Latin scholars through their translations of Caesar's campaigns.

for Student Welfare and Happiness

In charge of the never ending task of keeping H.H.S. clean are Arthur Mackie, George Finger, Dorothy Huskie, Elizabeth Paterson, Lela Mae Williams, and Robert Reed.

Conferences, Creative Writing, Oral and Written Drill,

Even if the listeners don't understand Latin, the universal language of the Christmas spirit is easily understood, as second year Latin students carol.

Como esta usted? Comment vas-tu? Quid agis? With the world shrinking to a neighborhood, the increase and advancements in means of transportation, there has appeared a sudden increase in the popularity of foreign languages. Living in this modern world, the knowledge of a second language is almost a necessity. At Hickory High the need is being answered through three foreign languages — Spanish, French and Latin. In these courses, conversational phrases are drilled orally and on paper. A major step is being taken this year with the addition of a language laboratory in which students work individually with tape recorders, and progress at rates equal to their own capabilities.

Advancements are also being made in the English Department. Students are placed in classes according to their potential levels of achievement. This program enables advanced students to learn without hindrance while regular students receive maximum supervision on their level. In all classes comprehension reading, creative writing, and vocabulary improvements are stressed.

The play Macbeth becomes vividly real to Miss Nancy Usrey's English class, as Luanne Kaylor, Libby Huggins, Joyce Cline, Elaine Bolick and Guy Huggins, arrayed in original costumes, present the witches' scene.

New Laboratory Answer the Language Need at H.H.S.

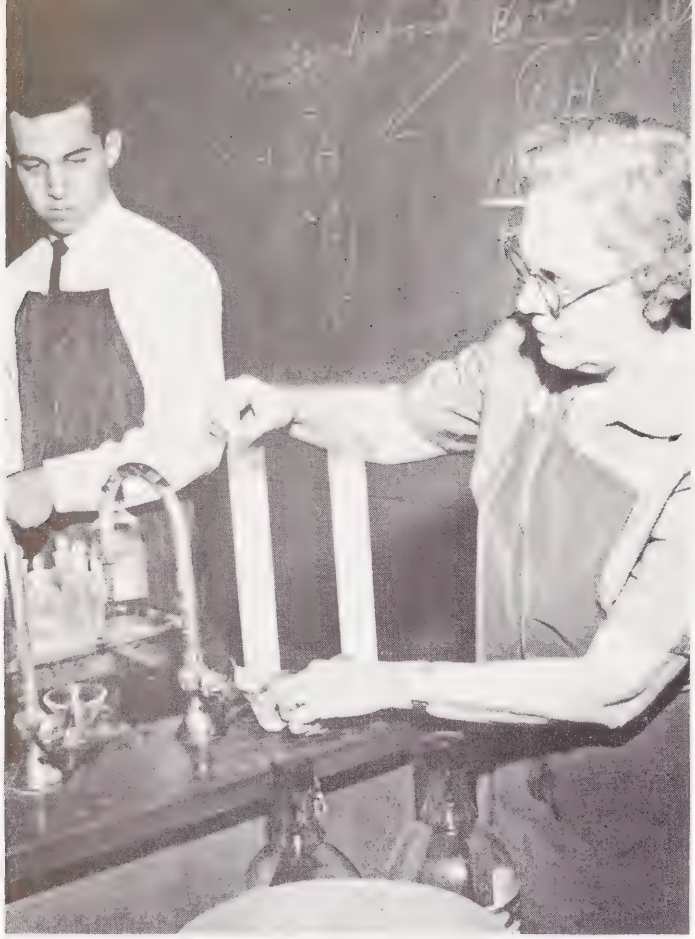

Research is part of the advanced junior English program. Mrs. Genella Allison shows Libby White and Sharon Kiser where to find source material in the Biographies of American Authors.

"Me siento!" exclaims Mr. Emory Hollar as he acts out an expression for his Spanish I class.

It's not her lipstick this time, but her lips that Pam Padgett is interested in as she practices new French sounds before the mirror.

Bengie Goodman watches with disbelief as Mrs. Reese proves that water can be turned into a base or an acid.

Bobbie Young is absorbed in learning the structural units of living things, as she focuses her microscope for another look.

. . . So you think it will work? . . . Well it doesn't, because in this case there are four pendulums instead of one," Mr. Styers reasons with his physics class.

Words literally spill off his tongue, when Wyant Bolick begins to explain his solid fuel rockets exhibition at the Science Fair held in Charlotte. The hours of experimentation are rewarded, as he places First Alternate Naval Award.

Frogs, Tubes, and Pendulums Create Odors and Ideas

As confusion dies in the halls of the science building, another day and first period begin. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors share in the adventures of the modern sciences: biology, chemistry, and physics.

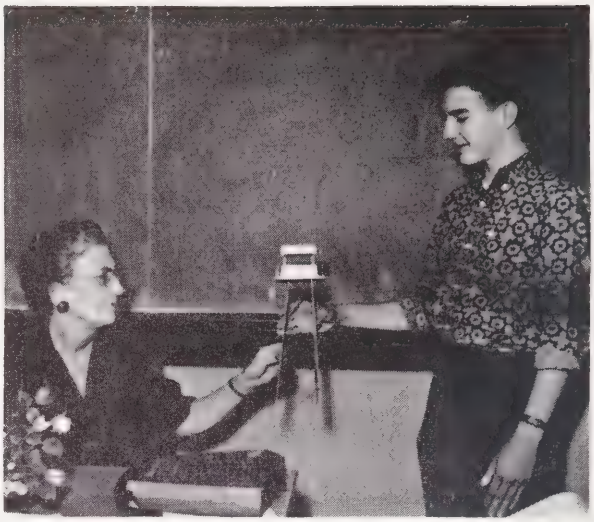

Chemicals, test tubes, microscopes, pulleys, and levers enter into experiments which disclose valuable facts and paths to hidden discoveries. In the most scientific period of history, the desire for these basic subjects becomes greater and greater. To satisfy this greater need, Hickory High has consistently added more well-trained faculty members, new books, better materials, and additional classes. Much new equipment has been provided through the National Defense Education Act program.

Although both the required course in biology and the optional courses in chemistry and physics require a maximum of diligent study, students find that prying into the limitless world of scientific phenomena is worthwhile, as well as interesting to them.

"His reflexes are all intact," Lou Anne Turpin comments to her biology partner David Yelton, as she gingerly pokes a kicking frog.

One of many such projects, this detailed, geometric construction by Charles Aultman seems to meet the approval of Miss Greever.

A glimpse through the door of Miss Smyre's algebra class reveals expressions of mixed emotions—puzzlement, disgust, joy, inattention, boredom, surprise.

Math Proves the Key to Clear and Logical Thinking

Accuracy + reasoning = mathematics! In both the world of today and of tomorrow, work usually requires the important tools of accuracy, precision, and logical thinking—all of which are developed by mathematics courses.

Along with the bewildering atmosphere of H.H.S., most sophomores find themselves sitting in a new and different type of math class, plane geometry. Here, names such as Euclid and Pythagoras come to life as important theorems and basic principles are proven by deductive thinking. The often repeated question of, "Why do we learn this?" is answered as students come in contact with the everyday uses of geometry through special projects.

Just one year away from plane geometry, juniors begin the journey into Algebra II with its x's, y's, quadradics, and radicals. Delving deeply into this realm, basic algebraic concepts and applications are studied.

Many seniors elect to take the last year of high school math, solid geometry and trigonometry. For some students excelled in mathematics ability, the 1962-63 school year provides further possibility for advancement through a new and special course. These students, without teacher supervision, work individually, recording their work in special notebooks; then take prepared tests.

Recognizing the need for math in the important careers of today, students are beginning to consider mathematics an essential, as well as a required, course.

Commercial Courses Lay Foundation for Careers in Business

Setting the wheels of tomorrow's business world into efficient action, H.H.S.'s commercial department is rendering a much needed service, not only to the students, but also to the community, by endeavoring to produce competent clerical workers.

The commercial courses which are available to students include typing, shorthand, and bookkeeping. In typing a student is taught all of the fundamentals essential to a professional typist while developing speed and accuracy in his work. Shorthand opens to the student a world of curves and lines, each representing a definite sound which must be learned and practiced in order to become proficient in the field of secretarial work. Bookkeeping exposes the intricacies of working with debits and credits.

These three courses help to pave the way for bookkeeping and secretarial jobs after graduation. Many students also take typing and shorthand as a preparation for future college work. Furthermore, commercial courses give each student an opportunity to decide whether he is fitted for, and interested in, clerical work as a possible vocation.

J. Bumbarger proves that shorthand can be used in a Christmas project.

The business-like sound of typing ceases as students count their mistakes, figure up their words per minute, and cover their typewriters at the end of another period.

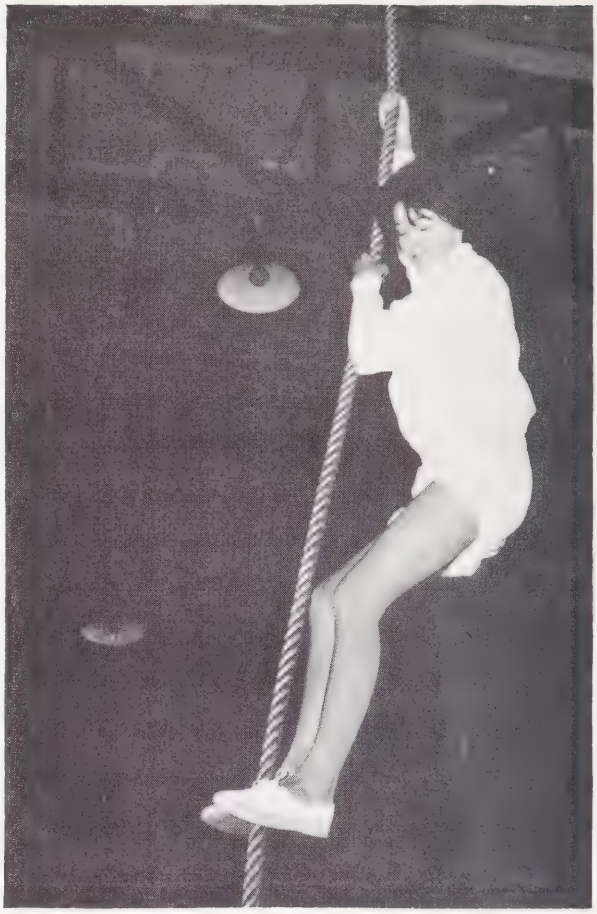

Soft Muscles Firm Up in Physical Education Classes

Boys in physical education classes find that President Kennedy's prescribed "physical fitness program" keeps them on their toes.

Striving for physical as well as mental education, the girls in Coach Barger's health class take part in strenuous calisthenics.

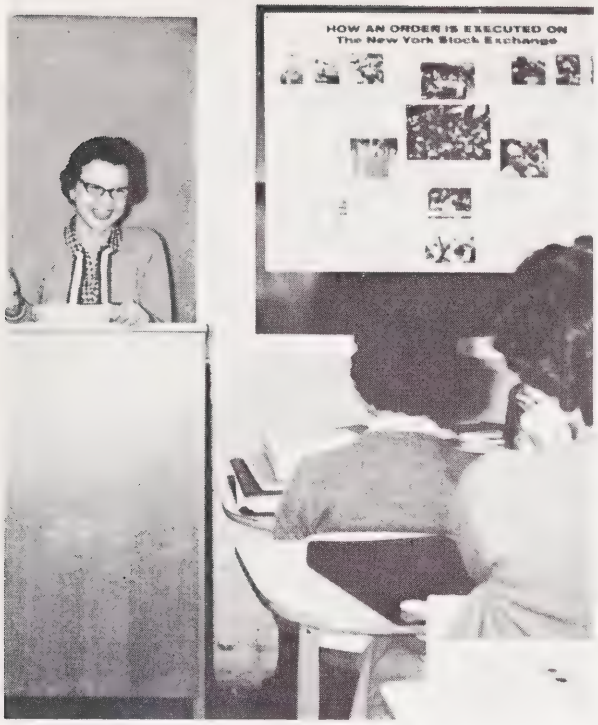

"Me Jane," says Jeannie Brooks as she performs a Tarzan act in girls' physical education class.

In an age of mechanization requiring brain rather than brawn, the physical education department is confronted with the task of emphasizing the need for physical, as well as mental development. Due partially to the reluctance of students to apply themselves physically, only a minority of the students obtain the benefits of the physical development program offered to both girls and boys.

Those who do participate receive a course of instruction ranging from exercises to what constitutes a balanced diet. On the athletic field and in the gymnasium, students gain proficiency in such sports as softball, basketball, volleyball, table tennis, football, and tumbling. Classroom instruction in personal hygiene is also an integral part of the physical education program.

Mrs. Doris Sigmon's world history students find that her sense of humor adds to the interest of lectures on medieval France.

Future clients Mary Scott Spencer, Tanya Smyre, Charles Murray, and Rod Sipe visit the First National Bank. Members of Mrs. Sigmon's economics classes learn how to establish checking accounts, make deposits, and are introduced to the operation of the trust, savings, and loan departments.

How can a student, without leaving the classroom, play the stock market, take a world tour, witness the signing of the Declaration of Independence, or visit ancient Rome? The social studies department offers these new experiences to H.H.S. students.

Realizing that the young people of today must have a clear understanding of the important events of the past, the world they live in, and the people who compose the complex society of the world, this department offers courses in geography, economics and sociology, world history, and United States history in its curriculum.

History's Prologue Is Examined in the Light of Today

Historical dates, figures, and battles often seem vague, but Vernon Taylor's U. S. history lesson assumes much greater meaning when Mr. Lyerly uses the map to show the location of important events.

It's no longer a man's world in industrial arts—Wilma Lawter and Judy Lowman help Mike Hamman and Mackie Lynn with woodworking projects.

Challenge, training, and experience—these are the goals and results of practical arts which seek to prepare students for the hectic everyday world of twentieth century America.

Half a day at school, then the mad rush to push a time clock is the life of the Diversified Education and Vocational Industrial Club student. Compensating for this rushed schedule are the valuable training and experience that students interested in going directly into the business world after high school, or seeking early preparation in a chosen field receive.

In the art classroom one will confront such terms as proportion, depth perception, and color co-ordination aimed at developing the artistic talents of each student. Long tedious hours at the lathe reward the woodworking student with valuable experience as well as beautiful and practical articles.

Becoming a good wife and mother is almost every girl's dream. Through homemaking, the necessary qualities for making a successful home are cultivated. Valuable training is gained in fields ranging from making cherry pies and feeding the baby to planning the family budget.

Ornamental Objects and Useful Products are Created in the Hopeful homemakers of tomorrow, Mary Jane Penley, Sherry Phillips, and Ruby Simmons, take their first step toward future responsibilities as they work on fall ensembles.

Paulette Bolick and Dottie Ann Williams arrange a few of the Christmas projects that the homemaking girls have been working on from Thanksgiving to Christmas vacation.

A dab of glue and yarn are only the beginning of Linda Kiger's original abstract collage.

Practical Arts Department

Appearing almost like mannequins themselves, Judy Bullock and Jean Benfield put the finishing touches on an attractive D. E. window display.

Hot Days, Damp

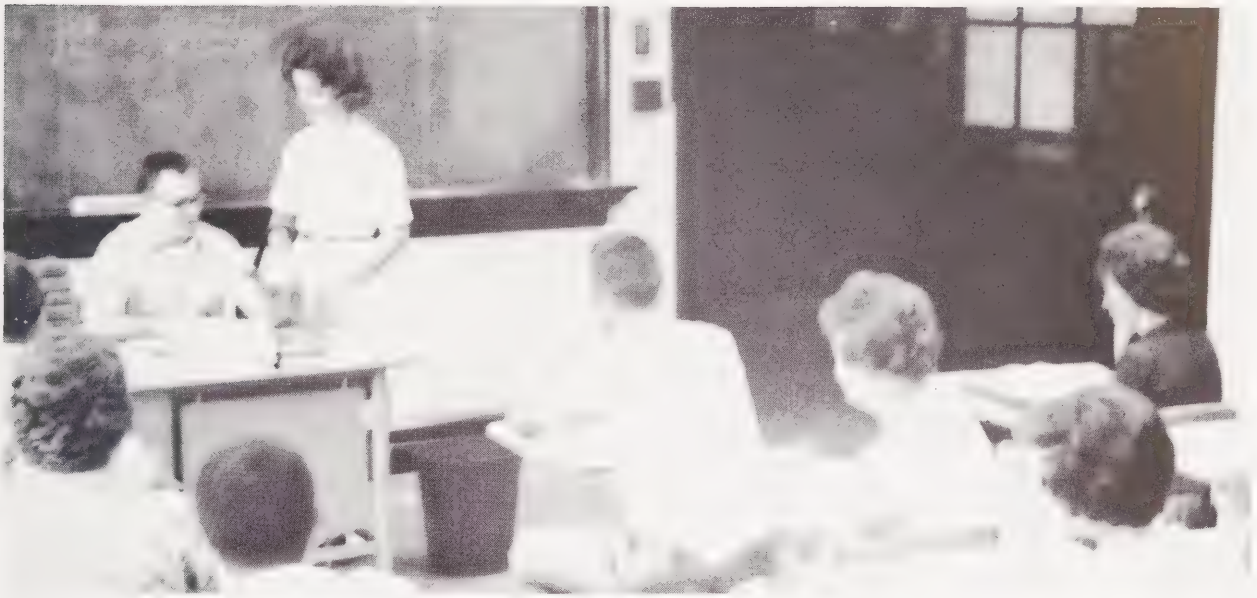

The shaded side of the building becomes a haven for the weary summer school students, taking a break from their five hour classes.

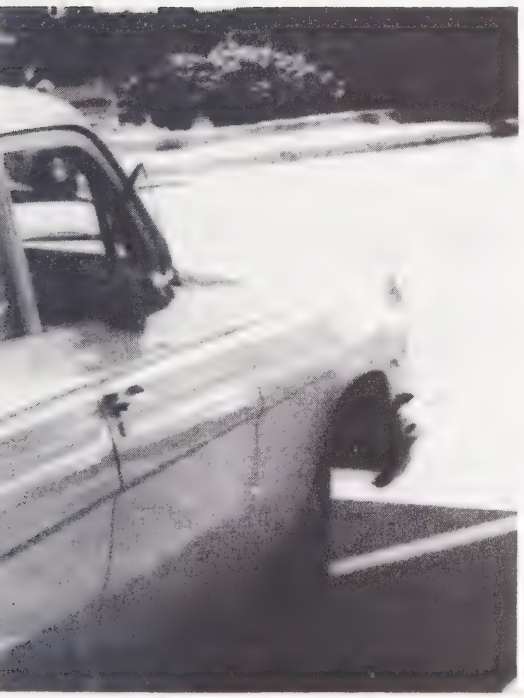

Careful, look out for that car! Under the watchful eye of Mr. Barger, driving instructor, James Cilley learns to maneuver the training car through city traffic.

Brows, and Hard Work Add Up to Summer School Credits

In appreciation of the many hours spent preparing lessons for the Algebra II class in summer school, Libby Frye, on the behalf of the other members of the class, presents Mr. Dellinger with a gift.

"Some people must really be gluttons for punishment!" This is a frequent comment heard when students register for an extra six weeks of school—classes, homework, exams, and projects. These students have not gone berserk. To the contrary, they are either looking into the future or making up credits which are needed for graduation.

The summer session of '62 offered seven credit and two non-credit courses, conducted by twelve of Hickory school system's teachers. Typing, U. S. History, biology, study skills, and varied math courses were the subjects given in the summer session.

The six-week session was divided into two periods, extending from June eleventh to twenty-ninth and from July ninth to twenty-second. The students were given the week of July the fourth for vacations and were allowed only two excused absences.

Summer School at H.H.S. has been such a success that it is assured of continuance in the future and will attract more so-called "gluttons" for greater education.

STUDENTS

1962-1963 Events in Review

"Whew, it's all over for three whole months." Expressions like these are somewhat general around Hickory High School on the last day of school as students pour out, overjoyed but yet melancholy.

Pauline Blevins finds scraping her plate too much like home.

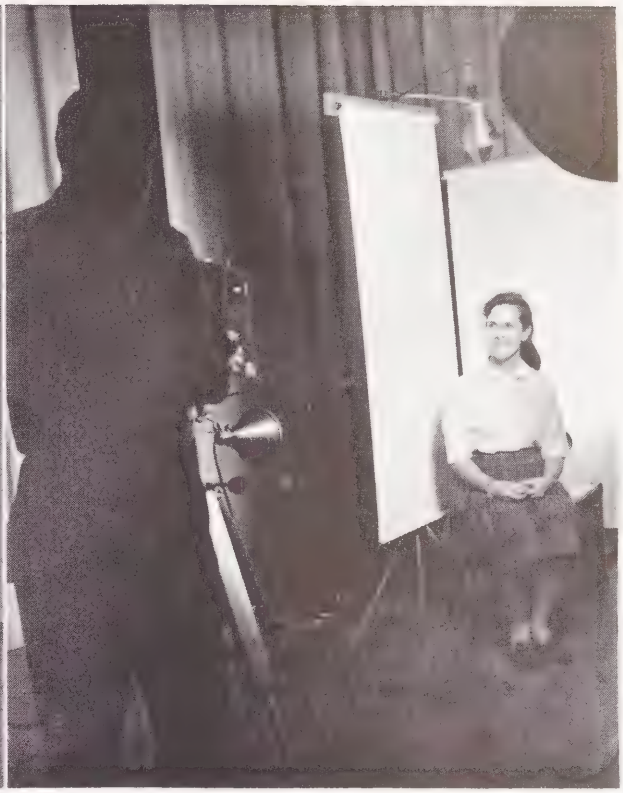

A Senior stands alone to face many decisions, problems, and the future.

"It must be a mirror," says Roger Link as he eyes with puzzlement the diminutive identical twins, Larry and Gary Minton.

Capturing a smile as lovely as Babbie Walker's is a job well done for any photographer, especially one taking school pictures.

Becky Cromer and Charles Murray get last minute instructions before leading the graduation class of 1962 down the aisle.

Among the conformists and cliques, there is always the individual who stands alone, unafraid to be different.

Senior Class Officers

With just one more semester to struggle through, Senior Class officers Wyant Bolick, Pres.; Bruce Herman, Vice-Pres.; and Joyce Cline, Sec.; make preparations for graduation exercises.

THE 1963 SENIOR CLASS

This is their year—a year of being honorees at homecoming, guests rather than hosts at Junior-Senior, participants behind the scenes and on the stage at the Class Play, a class recognized by the School Board at an Open House, leaders rather than followers, teachers of new students, and the class which occupies the berth they have anticipated for eleven years.

This year has not been all glory and honor. It has been a year of hard work. It has involved taking Senior placement tests, College Boards, and job and college applications.

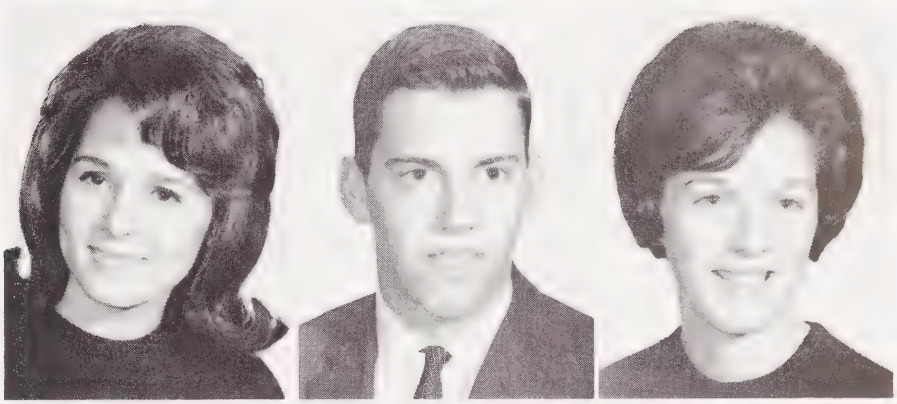

Each has shared with underclassmen the apprehension before semesters, the grueling hours of cramming, the constant grind of day to day preparation, the fellowship through extracurricular activities, the feeling of exuberance as the band plays Dixie, and the excitement and sadness when each Senior realizes that his last pep rally is over. Each has faced demands, however, with maturity and confidence which have slowly developed during their school years. Slowly, they have developed into young adults.

Climaxing twelve years of preparation for the all important event, Seniors take off their caps and gowns and suddenly realize it is all over. High school is now behind them and each now faces a divergent destination. This has been his year!

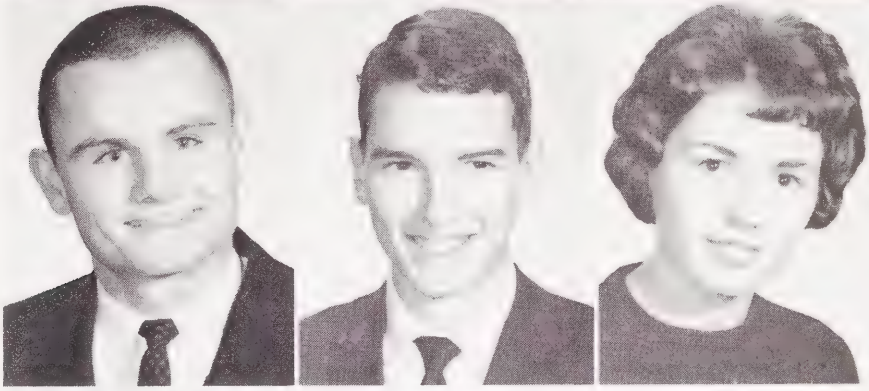

Once again each moves from the known to the unknown. Once again each must make his mark, and on a larger scale than Hickory High. However, the fears are well-covered; few will know they exist. Insecurities are masked by supreme self-confidence and the world is his to conquer.

THE SENIOR CLASS • 1963

Mr. Hollar realizes that summer vacation is near after the task of taking up books is completed.

Co-captain Gary Nicholas discusses the events of the evening, both good and bad, with an attentive listener, Karen Collins.

Everyone looks forward to a pep rally when pressures gathered during the week can be released through cheers and Dixie.

Junior Class Officers

THE 1963 JUNIOR CLASS

Juniors return to H.H.S. with a purpose and responsibility. At no other time in his high school career will he be this well placed in his selected society. After struggling through the chaos and change of the Sophomore year, he is now among those in authority. Yet, the responsibility is not fully his for there are still those above him. A great feeling of accomplishment accompanied by a feeling of insecurity grasps each Junior when he realizes that he has completed over half of his high school education. Each has developed more independence and realizes that he will soon decide what the future will hold for him. Each has his own decisions which will greatly affect his life.

His activities supervised and held to a minimum during his Sophomore year, the Junior for the first time is able to choose his own extracurricular activities. Some are leaders in clubs, some are editors of various publications, some play in the band, some play football, some are responsible for the Junior-Senior, or some achieve academic recognition for the school. He alone will be the one who will form his future. He is now able to determine for himself whether he will further his education or enter directly into the world of business. Each service that he performs will in some way aid him in the future.

To each Junior, the next year holds a promise of harder work, greater positions, more independence, and the idea that the coming year will be his best and his last in his high school career.

THE 1963 SOPHOMORE CLASS

From summer sophistication to autumn bewilderment, the Sophomore Class enters H.H.S. with awe and timidity. After the rush of registration, there is the thrill of many "firsts." For the first time it matters to him if H.H.S. wins the weekly Friday night football game. For the first time he, too, is allowed to release the tensions of the week at the pep rally. For the first time he is allowed to eat away from school. For the first time he finds himself subject to the whims of upperclassmen, enduring the "elevator passes," the "book chute," and the "locker receipts." For the first time he realizes what semester exams really are. For the first time he discovers that the burning of the midnight oil is necessary. All of these "firsts," whether good or bad, become a part of the Sophomore year.

The Sophomore year is a year of change. Ideals and ideas mature. Likes and dislikes are developed further, new friends are made, and although independence is still limited, he finds himself all alone in a sea of strange faces. It is now his responsibility to do his work and his responsibility to develop a personality that will make his high school years beneficial and memorable.

By the end of his Sophomore year the greenness is beginning to fade, and he finds himself with a bit of confidence and a feeling of actually being a part of his high school, H.H.S.

Community Center Program Falls into the Realm of Student

Bottow Row: Mrs. Kathryn Lackey, Adviser; P. Bock, Pres.; I. Wilfong, Treas.; R. Cilley, Sec.; K. Hemphill, Corresp. Sec.; K. Baker, B. Sherrill, Vice-Pres. Top Row: B. Jonas; D. Yelton; L. Lackey; T. Million; E. Schmulling; G. Stroup; G. Karlidag.

Mixed expressions of joy and surprise are shown on Mrs. Kathryn Lackey's face as she opens the birthday present presented to her by the Student Council.

For the protection of both the school and the car owners, a new requirement of litter bags and car identification was added this year, and Paul Bock, representing the Student Council, helps to enforce this regulation.

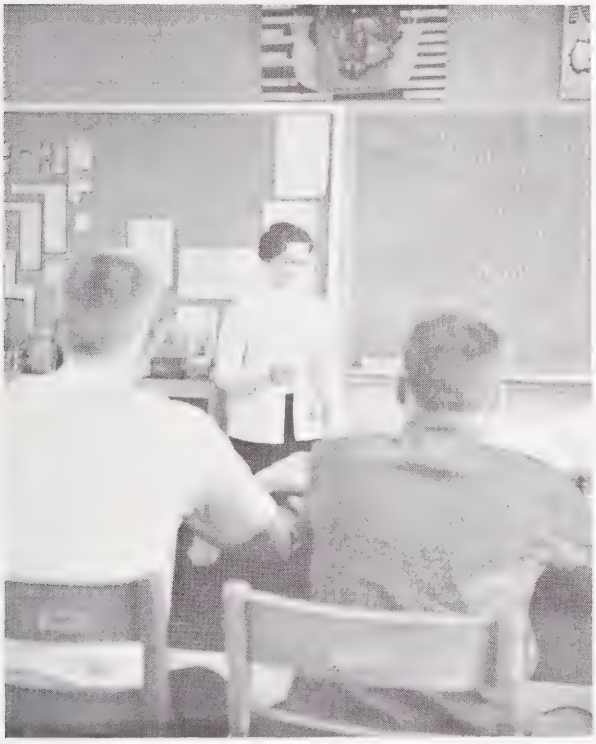

Council Responsibilities

Student Council . . . two small words, but they loom large in importance in the school's environment. Beginning during the summer vacation, the Council starts to lay the foundation of its activities, for the coming year. Members attend conventions as far away as California, new members are orientated into Student Council policies and procedures, and through pre-planning, part of the confusion of the first month of school is anticipated and eliminated.

When Labor Day signals the opening of school, the Council is there to direct registration and provide information to new students. The services rendered by this organization vary from orientation to the Homecoming festivities. Among their other duties are: finding a club sponsor for each dance, checking students' cars for registration, organizing Senior Open House, and supervising the printing and selling of the football programs at home games.

Reversing the usual order, Sophomore Janice Gaston does Senior Ida Lee Wilfong a favor by purchasing a Student Council football program.

Kathryn Hemphill, Student Council secretary, reads minutes of the preceding week's activities to Student Council members at the formal business meeting.

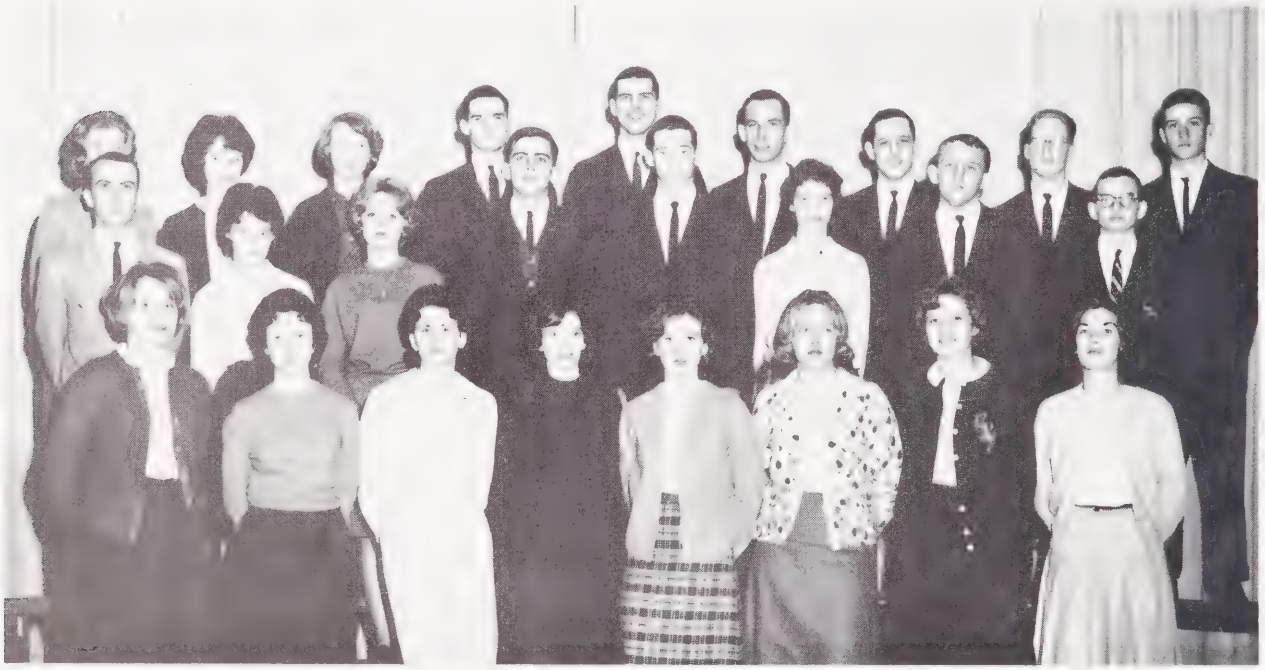

Serving as the intermediary link between clubs and the principal, the Inter-Club Advisory Council is composed of the President, or a substitute representative from each club at H.H.S. One of the youngest clubs of the school, it is also one of the most important. Although this group does not have a regular monthly meeting, Inter-Club Advisory Council members are always "on call" in case a problem arises that pertains to H.H.S. activities. The usual tasks of the Council include reviewing club charters, suggesting changes which might be helpful, assisting new organizations in writing their constitutions, and handling problems which arise pertaining to the clubs. Advised by Mr. Cottrell, and presided over by the president of the Student Council, its purpose is to evaluate and improve the club program at H.H.S. and to increase its meaning to the school and its student body.

Margaret Gwin, member of the Inter-Club Advisory Council, with the aid of Mr. Cottrell, checks to make certain that the organizations of H.H.S. are not hindering the scholastic standing of students.

In the manner of our nation, Hickory High provides students with the democratic privilege of electing representatives. The entire student body, divided into homerooms, elect persons to link them with the Student Council. Thus, the Homeroom Representatives is formed.

Working side by side with the Council, representatives help to strengthen ties between the student body and its elected government. Stressing the ideas expressed by the Student Council is the main objective of the group, but other duties range from policing the lunch lines to selecting deserving students as Students of the Month. Selling football programs, providing openhouses, helping with Homecoming, and assisting with orientation typify their positions as the righthand of the Student Council.

Following a Homeroom Representative's meeting, Kathy Pritchard reports the coming events to her homeroom during activity period.

Beta Club Provides Reward for Scholastic Accomplishments

On the football field, the tension mounts as a player makes a winning touchdown. In the classroom, tension is also high as a student strives for and attains a near perfect grade. Whose honor is greater? Surely both deserve recognition for their accomplishments. Through the Beta Club, students who achieve high scholastic goals are given their much earned recognition. The requirements for membership in this organization are high scholastic rating, leadership ability, and sound fellowship. These standards are the highest of any organization in the school, thus making it a very select group.

Primarily an honorary society, the main service for the year is rendered at graduation when junior members of the club act as marshals.

"This girl meets the requirements for the Beta Club, don't you think?" Miss Greever asks Jimmy Pugh, president of the club.

Journalism Weekend Is Latest Addition to Quill & Scroll

Warm friendships form quickly as Frances Kelly and Dorothy Moore entertain out of town guests during Quill and Scroll Weekend.

As the presses roll, H.H.S. journalism students anxiously await their annual edition of the Hickory Daily Record. Gathering information for news and feature articles which will capture the interest of Hickory-area readers, Quill and Scroll members channel their efforts into publishing the local paper.

The Quill and Scroll Society is a select group of students; drawn from the publications and radio staff, who have met specific membership requirements. Members sponsor several of the most important events at H.H.S. Journalism weekend, new this year, brought fifty-four young journalists to Hickory for two days of conferences, informal discussions, and fun. Proceeds from the Twirp Dance, Sock Hop, and Beauty Contest, also sponsored by this club, provide a scholarship for a deserving journalism student. This scholarship and trophies for the most valuable members of each staff are presented at the Quill and Scroll banquet. A resumé of the year's activities is made into a scrapbook for the National Quill and Scroll Contest held each spring.

New Adviser Stimulates Library Club Participation

The Library Club under the guidance of Mary Elliot Willis, its new adviser, has undertaken a new project this year: to co-operate with the guidance department in its career-of-the-month program. Each month the club arranges a bulletin board in order to inform students about each career featured by the guidance department.

Displays call attention to new books, special events and other ideas of interest to the students. Bake sales are held to raise money for various projects.

Yako Ito is the dedicatee of the Library Club's scrapbook which compares Japanese libraries to those in America.

The Library Club attends the Southwestern District North Carolina Library Clubs Conference held near Forest City in November and the State School Library Association meeting in April.

In order to inform the students of the new fall books Sylvia Blair, Judy Peeler, and Mrs. Willis arrange an attractive display outside the library.

P.T.A. Representatives Bring Parents Back to School

Sparking interest and enthusiasm in all P.T.A. activities is the main duty of the P.T.A. representatives. Sometimes this has to be accomplished by prodding reluctant students and activating uninterested parents, but usually a high membership percentage is reached.

P.T.A. representatives are vital factors in bridging the gap of better understanding between parents, teachers, and students.

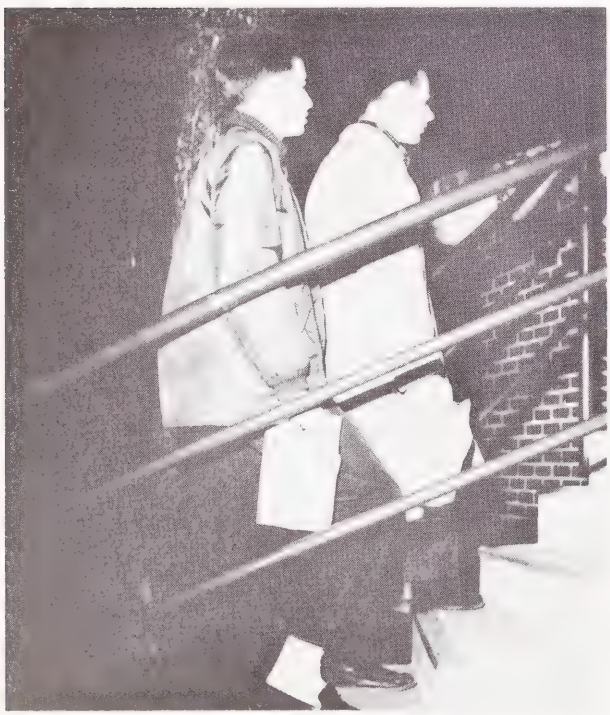

The highlight of this year's Parent-Teacher meetings was the program suggested, planned, and carried out by the P.T.A. representatives. For a full evening, parents followed the daily schedules of their sons and daughters, changing classes, climbing stairs, meeting and talking with teachers.

Baffled by their children's schedules, parents wander hopelessly around Hickory High School, but are aided by P.T.A. Representative Alice Barringer as she guides them to the rooms.

DeMolay Boys Take Place of "City Fathers for a Day"

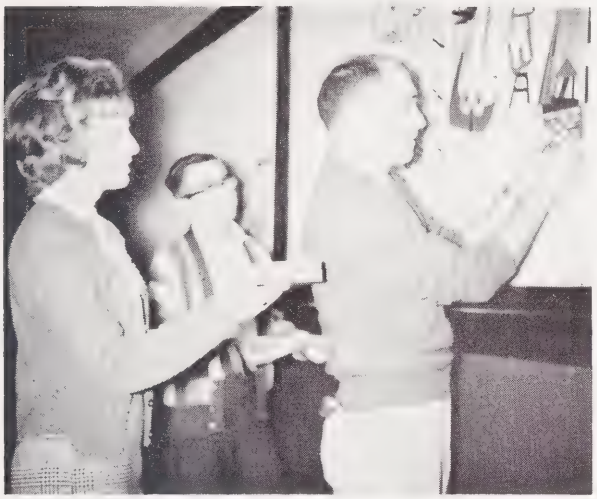

Forty-seven small Santa Clauses with a bag full of friendly feelings and unselfish contributions, the Jones W. Shuford Chapter of the Order of DeMolay, helps the needy persons of the surrounding community at Christmas time with their help to the "Empty Stocking Fund." This Masonic-sponsored organization is busy at the job of helping others. Part of their fund is set aside for the purpose of contributing to the Red Cross. Also, these boys collect money from various businesses in downtown Hickory in order to help other charity organizations.

With honor to mothers, fathers, and God, this Order of DeMolay strives to strengthen the bonds of good citizenship in the youths of Hickory.

Raising money to aid club funds, Craig Summers and Bill Dow sell light bulbs for the DeMolay.

Art Club Decorations Set Mood for the H.H.S. Dances

Stimulating the imagination to far off lands, Mr. Rankin and Art students Danny Huffman and Louanne Kaylor display colorful travel posters.

Autumn leaves of yellow, crimson, and orange flutter to the ground . . . Winter snows cover the landscape with a dazzling blanket . . . Multi-colored buds of flowers and trees mingle with the new-born grasses of spring . . . Through the glowing green foliage, the summer sun creates geometric patterns on the glistening pavement. Nature provides an abundant amount of scenic art work. Inside, people must supply their own art work, and organizations such as the Hickory High Art Club strive to approximate this missing natural beauty.

Unique bulletin boards which enlighten both Hickory High and the Administration Building are constructed by the Art Club. Extra-curricular enthusiasm is shown by conducting money-raising bake sales and by making clever decorations for leading school functions, including the Beauty Contest and the various dances.

"Sunshine and Shadows" Finally Emerge from LOG Room

Surrounded by a wall of secrecy busy LOG staffers are hard at work drawing layouts, writing and re-writing copy, and captioning pictures. Meanwhile two floors below, the business staff collects the money acquired from the solicitation of the ads from local business firms and the sale of pictures and LOGS to students. To surpass the existing high standards set by All-American and Medalist LOGS produced in previous years is the ever-present ideal.

While waiting for students to file into the auditorium on LOG Day 1962, Albert Reid is afforded a sneak preview by excited LOG editor, Kathy Cline.

Jean Benfield and Betty Knight consider which pictures should be used in their section of the LOG, while Frances Johnson busily captions one of their selections and Tanya Smyre types the finished product of hours of work.

Each year senior LOG members attend Columbia Scholastic Press Association in New York and send delegates to Southern Interscholastic Press Association in Lexington, Virginia. This year the '62 LOG received a first place rating at the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, and at the National Scholastic Press Association convention captured an All-American award, the highest honor a yearbook can receive.

Bringing together all of the pieces in the mosaic of H.H.S. life, the staff employs pictures and colorful journalistic style to create an accurate record of the school year. To people outside the school the LOG presents a picture of the scholastic program and H.H.S. students. To those who are a part of this mosaic it serves as a book of memories to be cherished.

After canvassing the town for ads, Patsy Brewer and Elizabeth Dellinger submit receipts to LOG business manager, Margaret Gwin.

HICKORY TWIG "Scoops" Hold the Center of H.H.S. Attention

Deadlines, dummy, captions, cropping—these are but a few of the terms familiar to the members of the Twig staff. In order to increase its circulation and know in advance how many papers to print, the paper is being sold only by subscription this year. The Twig staff, although relatively small, keeps its finger on the pulse and heartbeat of Hickory High School.

After one issue of the paper reaches the hands of H.H.S. students, members of the editorial staff busy themselves preparing for the next issue two weeks later. Assigned stories are turned in, typed, and copy read. Heads are then written, and all the material is taken to the printer who prepares galley sheets. The staff then takes the galley sheets, arranging copy on a dummy which is printed and returned to them. The dummy then undergoes a final proofreading and is sent for the last time to the printer. The financing of the Hickory Twig is in the hands of the business staff. Advertisements and subscriptions are sold to defray the costs of printing the bi-weekly paper.

The Hickory Twig displays among its many honors, the trophy awarded by the Western North Carolina Editors' Roundtable for the best school newspaper and awards for achieving first place in editorials, features, photography, and news at the North Carolina Scholastic Press Association convention. With great enthusiasm, delegates from the Twig staff look forward to the annual conventions.

Every Other Friday

A few expert pointers from Mr. Schumann of Hickory Engraving are given to Twig editors Jo Bumbarger and Steve Lail.

Once every two weeks, Margaret Hutto, Twig business staff member, makes her rounds, delivering H.H.S.'s paper to anxious students.

When the initial confusion of new students and new classes has settled into an organized schedule, the Leaves staff begins its tedious task of compiling a Student Directory. It contains the names, addresses, telephone numbers, and schedules of each student, teacher and school official. Proceeds from the sale of this booklet and covers for the LOG, along with the money obtained from the solicitation of ads from local business firms, provide the working capital for the organization.

The staff screens, compiles, and illustrates compositions submitted to them by creative English students. These essays, poems, short stories, and book reviews are representative of the time, talents, and energy necessary to produce noteworthy literary works. The result of their efforts is a magazine that is judged at both the Columbia Interscholastic Press Association and the Southern Interscholastic Press Association.

Helen Lawson discusses an original composition with Leaves staff adviser, Miss Nancy Huggins, to start off this year's collection of literary works.

After a hard week of school, nine-thirty on a Saturday morning comes awfully early to Bengie Goodman, Doug Rhymes, and Frances Rogers of Hickory Hi Speaks.

"Today, October 24, is United Nations Day. A day on which the world has been brought so close to the brink of war by an island to the south of us," said James Garrett as he presented the program for United Nations Day, a special project of the radio staff.

This is but one of the many projects in which the radio staff participates. Radio Day, the highlight of the staffer's year, is held annually, and is sponsored by W.I.R.C. It not only promotes broadcasting, but it also helps to develop talent in this division by letting the members of the staff conduct all editorial functions of the day.

To improve their sales techniques, news and feature stories for their program each Saturday, delegates are sent to S.I.P.A. each year and to the seminar at the University of North Carolina Radio Institute. To climax the year, two members of the staff are presented gold trophies for their outstanding work at the annual Quill and Scroll Banquet.

Tomorrow who will be the most imposing figure leading a class in a discussion of World War II, diligently proving the worth of the Pythagorean Theorem, of patiently drilling American high school students in the art of French phonetics? Through the Dixon-McComb Chapter of the Future Teachers of America, girls are given a chance to determine whether or not they are suited for the teaching profession. While acting as substitute instructors, members gain valuable experience in classroom management and procedures.

Acting as guides for the annual North Carolina Educators Association gives these students an even greater insight into the world of teaching.

A big smile makes the occasion easier for both students and future teacher, Jane Lee Shuler.

Future Homemakers of America Jan Keener and Linda Hefner prove to be adept hostesses as they serve refreshments to parents at open house.

"Toward new horizons" is a challenging motto for members of the Future Homemakers of America. It reminds them that what they contribute to their home life today will greatly influence the kind of homes they have tomorrow.

Appointed by state F.H.A. advisers as one of five chapters to represent North Carolina in the national magazine, Teen Times, the Hickory High chapter proudly carries out its duty to have interviews of their opinions of the magazine, and to work on two assigned projects. They conduct surveys in this particular area in order to discover how and why the magazine is used, and also publicize the F.H.A. by means of an article entitled "Let's Get Acquainted." Locally, the club is carrying on programs to explain the responsibilities of youth to the family.

V.I.C. Members Honor Employees at the Spring Banquet

Finding energetic members presents no problem for the Vocational Industrial Club; its membership includes students who devote part of their school day to working. As a participant in the diversified occupations program, each member is employed by a local business, usually in a non-retail type of job.

The club is one of a limited number in the state. Although no officers are elected on a statewide basis, the officers of local clubs convene annually at Gastonia for a district workshop. In the spring a state convention at Morehead City is held. The main objective is to adopt resolutions and suggestions to provide closer co-operation between the various chapters.

In recent years, a spring banquet honoring their employers is sponsored by V.I.C. members. The event contributes meaningfully to better employer-employee relationships.

Helping Wayne Teague plot his vocational future, Mr. Pittman, from the Employment Security Commission, goes over his past records and future preferences in the light of his aptitudes.

D.E. Presents Planter to Beautify Principal's Office

With a foreground of impressive white candles and the Distributive Education Club plaque, Eugene Couch is sworn in as president by Lula Canipe.

Through combined in-school instruction, on-the-job training and careful supervision of trainers by qualified coordinators, the best qualities of students are discovered and developed through Distributive Education.

The Distributive Education Club is a member of the district, state, and national clubs. For the past five years the H.H.S. Project has won first place in the club projects and general work awards, sponsored by Sears and Roebuck Company. In addition, an award is given to the best Distributive Education student by the local merchants. This year, financed by the yearly dues, the club is preparing slides of students at work, in classes, and doing club work. This will demonstrate to merchants, parents, and Hickory citizens the work of the club.

Weekly dancing classes are also provided for the club members to help them develop socially, and an award is then presented to the couple who show the most improvement.

Tomboys Cheer Needy with Presents at Christmastime

Attired in "whacky" clothes and unusual hairdos, a group of junior and senior girls parade around the school campus amidst staring students. These girls are being initiated into the Sub-Junior Woman's Club.

Each fall, the senior members play the juniors in the annual Powder Bowl Game. Although it may not be as exciting as a varsity squad game, it is unequalled in its hilarity. With funds obtained from this game, along with a candy sale and a dance, the club gives food and clothing to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Each year a Ridgeview girl is the recipient of a $100 scholarship and a donation is given to aid the mentally retarded children of our community.

With varied expressions of anticipation, curiosity, and nervousness, Margaret Lyerly, Camilla Schell, Karen Nicholas, and Renie Wysong await their fates as Sub-Junior initiates.

Key Club Plays Santa Claus to Unfortunate Children

Silver-sparkled snow covers the countryside, red-nosed children race indoors for a hot cup of cocoa, parents place the last presents under the Christmas tree, and many can enjoy Christmas time. But not everyone can enjoy this time of year, for there are some who are too unfortunate to have Santa visit them. Wanting to see others happy, the Hickory High Key Club plays Santa with gifts and toys for several under-privileged children of the city and accept only heart-warming laughter as thanks. Not only the community, but the school receives service from this organization. After a fund-raising candy sale, the boys provide some needed article for Hickory High.

With their projects and politically inspiring conventions, these young men are constructing a framework for tomorrow. Thus, these challenges made new experiences produce the opportunities which will create a meaningful and rewarding adult life in the community.

President of the Key Club, Paul Bock, discusses the results of the annual candy sale with Bill Sherrill.

Rigorous practice pays off for Tommy Havnaer by presenting the opportunity to sing in "Horn in the West" and to tour abroad with the American High School Chorus.

Also a veteran of "Horn in the West," Joe Turpin prepares for his summer abroad with the American Chorus, the reward of ardent training.

Practices Prepare Chorus for School, Public Concerts

During fourth period every afternoon, the music building is filled with melodious sounds coming from the choral room. Practicing diligently, the members of the mixed chorus work to perfect their concert and contest numbers. To broaden their musical experience, the chorus attends workshops throughout the year, including one in Mars Hill and another in Chapel Hill. When each member has been rehearsed to a point of near perfection, the chorus performs for various church, school, and civic organizations. Realizing and acknowledging the untiring efforts of the chorus, Hickoryites are always eager to hear them. For the public's benefit, several formal concerts are presented each year. In addition to these, special selections are presented by the chorus at the Baccalaureate and Graduation Exercises.

The chorus attends various contests throughout the state. Under the capable direction of Mr. Robert Ellis, the chorus receives the highest rating, making and breaking records with their achievements.

With the double intention of relieving tensed nerves and obtaining perfection, Mr. Ellis uses the last few minutes before the annual Christmas Concert for practice.

"The hills are alive with the sound of music." During the school year, the Hickory High Chorus fills the community with music.

Looking like a tin soldier, Jay Tate demonstrates the skill that won for him the drummer's position in the All-American High School Band.

Marching Band, Concert Band, Pep Band—a triune important to daily life at Hickory High School. Presenting exhibitions which delight the public, the Hickory High School Band works hours each week to perfect routines used at each performance. Outside of long weekly hours, the band members work during the summer in preparation for the up-coming year. Traveling to each football game, playing for pep rallies, giving concerts, and participating in Mass Band Day, illustrate the busy schedule of a band member.

Under the baton of Edward E. Smith, the H.H.S. Band has been awarded a two-page spread in The First Chair of America, a publication giving recognition to the finest bands of the United States.

As a climax to the year's activities a Graduation Concert is presented, and pins are awarded to Senior members as mementos of their days as members of the band.

Publication; Six in All-State Band

During his two years on the faculty, Mr. Smith has directed the Hickory High band to additional heights. Six members placed first chair in the Annual All-State Band Clinic. Two, Jay Tate and Ronnie Hufstader, will cover the southern states and Mexico as members of the All-American High School Band.

The key to a good band is its director. Mr. Smith "speaks" to his band with his hands telling them to play softer and smoother.

Among the newest of Hickory High School's clubs is the Chess Club. Stimulating interest in the classical game of chess, the club develops mental dexterity, quick responses, and sound fellowship among its members.

The club is composed both of experienced chess players, who perfect difficult plays, and of novices who are eager to learn the intricacies of the "game of princes."

Chess resembles war in that it consists of attack and defense, and it requires imagination and the ability to think of most moves before playing them.

The climax of the year is the annual City Tournament which is sponsored by this club. To the call of "Checkmate!" a victor is chosen among competitors from Hickory High School, and College Park Junior High.

Dutifully applying themselves to the scholarly game of chess, Robert Little and Danny Ligon prove themselves very capable with pawns, knights, and queens.

Student Bus Drivers Rack up Enviable Safety Record

Replacing the traditional little-red-schoolhouse as a symbol of education is an awkward orange bus boldly displaying this watchword: CAUTION. Protected by this sign of admonition, students are uneventfully transported to and from school daily by a state-controlled network of buses, providing a vital link in the complex procedure involved in modern educational programs. Caution is likewise extended to the selection of reliable drivers. Each applicant is required to pass a rigorous examination before being licensed to drive a bus. After assignment to a bus route, each driver is required to present a monthly report including daily mileages and a count of passengers carried. As an additional safety measure each driver must make a daily routine check of the safety devices of his bus and report any malfunction.

Under prudent adult supervision H.H.S.'s bus drivers have compiled a safety record which is a credit to the school as well as to themselves.

A last-minute smoke, a serious check of report cards and further instructions for the day are given to Cyril Hammer, Gene Rodney Miller, and Wayne Vaughn by Mr. Troy Washam, Adviser.

Candy Sale Provides Finances for Spanish Club Projects

Tortillas, tamales, frijoles . . . add Spanish food served with all the color and tradition of Old Spain to a festive atmosphere, and the result is a meal which is one of the gayest occasions for the Spanish Club members.

At its meetings, the club entertains guest speakers who have visited Spanish countries or who know a great deal about the customs there. The information gained from these talks is a valuable supplement to the student's academic course.

By selling candy door-to-door in the community, club members raise money for a scholarship which is presented to a deserving senior, thus enabling him to further his study of Spanish.

The Spanish Club finds that its harmony is not superb, but the meaning of Christmas Carols remains the same in any language.

Toga and Stolla are Donned for the Latin Club Banquet

In the traditional Roman manner, Ronald Sain faithfully carries out his master's wishes.

A solemn-faced judge rises and calls the court to order . . . a brain surgeon skillfully performs an operation that will save a little child's life . . . a priest majestically goes through the rites of a Roman Catholic Church service. In each of these persons' backgrounds, Latin has played an important part in training for his or her profession. By observing these and other uses of Latin around them, the Latin Club members are making Latin a part of their modern world.

Finances for the organization are obtained through dues and through the annual "Slave Sale" in which new members are auctioned off to old members. These "slaves" must do their masters' bidding for a week.

During the year, the members attend High Mass at Belmont Abbey, go Christmas caroling, observe Latin Week in April, and spend a day as observers in court.

Staying in volunteered host homes, these visiting students' knowledge of the American way of life is expanded.

"I say that you and Judas are closely akin." Does this insult sound like a challenge to a duel? No, it is just one of the favorite expressions of the members of H.H.S.'s Debating Club. Such major problems as the United States' actions towards Cuba serve as ammunition for the ever smoking guns of the club, and keep the members in constant touch with what is going on in the world. National debate topics as well as those chosen by the members are used. Manuals and guide books serve as aids for members in learning to speak confidently in public, to combine ideas well, to think maturely and objectively, and to present important views to the other members and to the school.

The club conducts formal meetings on one Tuesday of each month and presents a debate to the entire student body once during the year.

In its second year, the Debating Club has already proven itself a valuable addition to the school's extracurricular program. In line with the trend toward more training in public speaking, H.H.S. fills this important need in student education.

New Engineers' Club Popular Activity Among H.H.S. Boys

If highly technical conversations on the parts and functions of double-lobed overhead racing cars happen to be right up your alley, and if, in your leisure hours, you can always be found curled up in some cozy corner absorbing a copy of Mechanics Illustrated, the Engineers' Club could be well worth your while. Not only are the engineers concerned with automotives, but with all other aspects of engineering. Acoustical engineering, electrical, traffic, sanitary, and hydraulic engineering are among the many branches studied by the club. Engineers representing these various fields are often interviewed to give the members a first-hand look at engineering put to work in industry. These interviews afford them a glance into possible engineering careers and their vocational thoughts towards a specific area.

"Maybe it needs a new motor!" exclaims Danny Coulter to Charles Murray, both members of the Engineers' Club.

Junior and senior members decide on the color and monogram for the blazers and receive them near the end of their Junior year. Working hard all year is rewarded with the presentation of this mark of athletic ability.

Student Secretarial Aid For Teachers has been inaugurated this year by the newest of the many clubs on the H.H.S. campus, the Future Business Leaders of America. The purpose of this phase of the club's many planned activities is to provide the students with valuable and practical experience. In addition to gaining personal benefit, they relieve teachers from hours of typing, cutting stencils, and mimeographing tests in order that they may spend more time in lesson preparation and individual attention to student problems.

A trip to the State Convention in early spring is planned. Here members of the club may exchange thoughts with other Future Business Leaders of America in other sections of the state, broaden their scope of knowledge concerning business life, and better enable themselves to present the pros and cons of the commercial world to fellow club members and the student body.

With dexterity that will prove very useful in their future careers, Barbara Bruner, Linda Greene, Darnell Young and Anita White make use of the business facilities available at H.H.S.

ATHLETICS

What is a cheerleader? A cheerleader is "Miss Pep" personified. A cheerleader is a girl chosen for certain effervescent qualities of personality that set her apart from the rank and file.

How are they chosen? The student body elects the girls from the Sophomore, Junior and Senior classes to represent them in this select organization.

What do they do? They work as hard as any group at Hickory High. Beginning in early August, the cheerleaders practice daily to perfect cheers and intriguing specialty numbers for pep meetings. These unique cheers and skits often come from the long hours of training at cheerleading camp which is held during the summer months. Here the girls meet cheerleaders from schools in surrounding states, share their ideas, and return home to delight the student body with these new and different ideas. Cheerleaders must also use their creativity by making different and interesting displays for the bulletin board in the main hall. They also have the duty of raising and lowering the flag daily. Cheerleaders act as a unifying bond between the team and the student body. They rally team support at in-town and out-of-town games, and serve as the symbol of school enthusiasm.

Coaches Produce Winning Teams Through Hours of Drill

Spending many long hours in preparing their individual teams for the season's games, coaches teach their players the fundamental plays and drill them through practice, day after day. The backbone of their teams' success, coaches give greatest emphasis to teamwork, which turns a group of hopefuls into a winning unit.

Until 3:30 each afternoon, coaches instruct their regular schedule of classes, instilling in their pupils honesty, integrity, and loyalty.

While other teachers depart after a hard day, the coaches' second job begins. Through patient instructing, demonstrating, and praising of players, gradually the boys are molded into a team by practice, sportsmanship, and strict conduct.

One of the "fringe benefits" coaches enjoy is having their own special room. There, they reminisce about players of the past and memorable games—that favorite pastime of any coach.

Coach Garrett conducts blocking practice on the sled, preparing his linemen for Friday's game.

Co-captains Bryan Anderson and Gary Nicholas watch as the outcome of the kick-off depends on one small coin.

Although the season was disappointing to the school and players, nevertheless it was a valuable year in gaining experience for successive seasons.

With few returning starters this year, a football team was formed almost entirely from juniors. A unified body of players was molded through long hours of drill, hot practices in the summer sun, afternoon scrimmages after school, and skull practices at night. Studying the fundamentals of blocking and tackling, the players were disciplined into a smooth, efficient organization.

However, another championship year was not in the cards for the football team. They won six and lost four games. Of these, three were to conference opponents, and one, the opening game, to "four-A" Gastonia.

Although the team did not win championships and trophies or as many honors as in years past, they still received the basic benefits. They enjoyed the comradeship of a team, building muscular bodies, the companionship of close friends, and learning to play fairly by the rules.

At the end of the season an assembly was given in honor of the football players before fellow students. Receiving recognition for their contributions to the football team, players were awarded trophies. Leading ground gainer, Ronald Jones received the most versatile trophy, Danny Huffman was the recipient of the sportsmanship award; the best blocker trophy was given to Mike Willet; Co-captain Bryan Anderson accepted the trophy for the best defensive player for the team. Eric Washam received the scholastic achievement award for maintaining the highest averages in all his courses. This award was made at the annual football banquet held at the end of the season.

Hickory High has school spirit! Prodded, taught, led and praised by the enthusiastic cheerleaders, the student body rises to the strains of Dixie and rebel yells. This enthusiasm is transmitted into the community. As a result, sizeable crowds follow the football teams into the stadium for in and out-of-town games.

School spirit is also aroused at unscheduled "pep rallies" held at the lower gate of Claremont Central on Fridays before games.

The ever-busy cheerleaders, besides organizing the official rallies, remind students of games through eye-catching bulletin boards and last minute game reminders over the P.A. system.

Outscoring Northwest Conference foes has become the characteristic of the 1963 Red Tornado basketball quintet. Close games, runaways, defensive battles—all these comprise the colorful winning ways of the cage team. Even though the winning margins in some games were tremendous, the last minute cliff hangers were frequent this season. Racing against the clock as well as the opposition, the team several times gained its margin of victory from last-second shots.

Experience proved to be an infallible warrior, bolstering the team's desire to win. Forming the nucleus of the team were three starters returning from last year's squad. With capable senior playmakers Tommy Deal and Doyle Cole at the guard positions and All-Conference choice Britt Brittain at the pivot, the offensive attack functioned with accuracy and precision. Invaluable depth was added to the squad from unexpected sources—the team was sparked by the addition of new players, seniors Earle Whitener and Tommy Oliver.

Solid backing from an enthusiastic student body gave the team the extra push needed to place it among the most successful teams in the school's history.

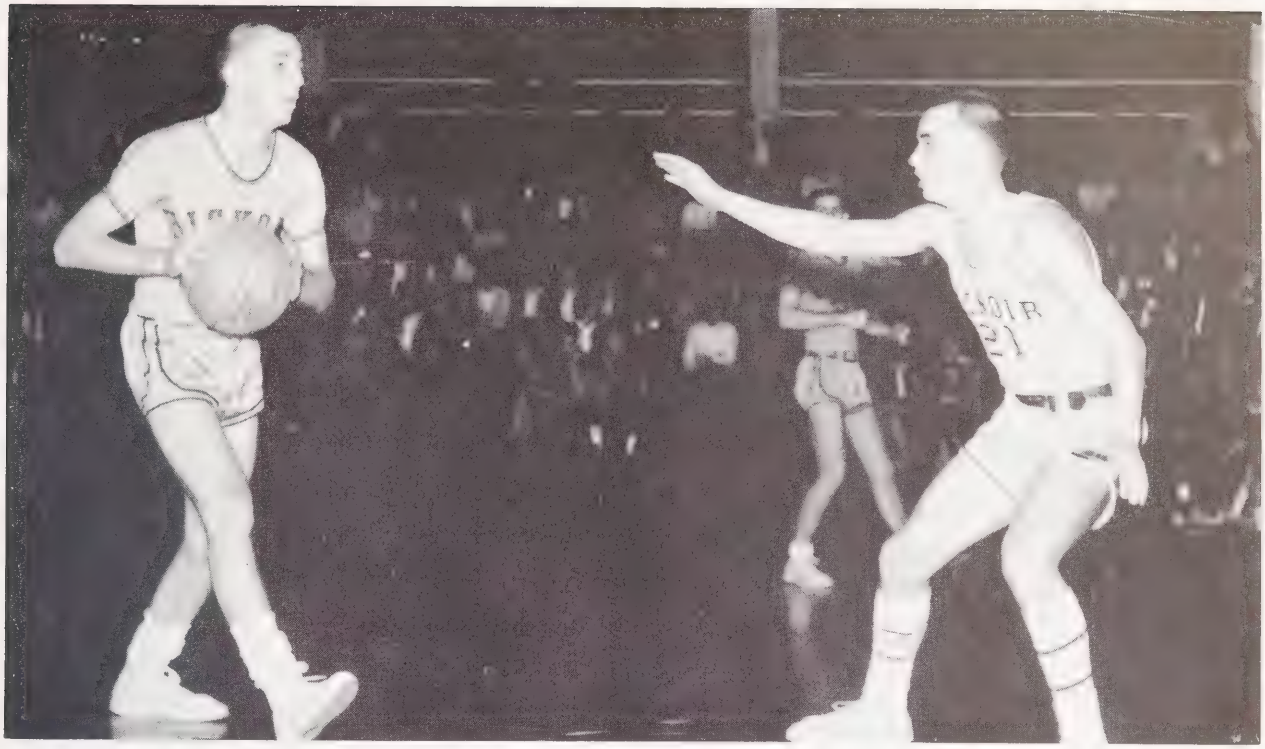

Seemingly suspended in mid air, Earle Whitener scores two points for H.H.S. while his teammates and opponents are poised for a possible rebound.

High scorers Ronnie Randle and Dick Deal, co-captains, practice lay-ups and rebounding in gym.

Capturing the conference championship with a nearly perfect season of thirteen wins and one loss, the junior varsity basketball team showed promising speed and agility. If these boys were asked why they went out for basketball their answer would be "to win." Win they did, losing only one game in a sudden death playoff, after an overtime, in the last game of the season. Towering over one team one hundred and six to thirty-two, the pace of scoring was set at sixty-five points a game.

At season's beginning Jim Garrett found the components of a fine team; his job was to assemble these parts into a well oiled basketball machine. High scorer and rebounder, Ronnie Randle, waged battle under the back boards with bigger boys and came out on top. Dickie Deal, playmaker, ball handler, and fast break engineer, led the team through a nearly perfect season that gave unbeatable promise for the future.

The 1962 baseball team, coached by Mark Lyerly, again had a successful season. Aided by a number of returning players, the team posted a 5-3 record for the year.

Outstanding members were seniors Wally Stepp, Durwood Markham, and Gary Robinson. Stepp, who excelled in playing first base, was also a valuable man at bat. Cindermen Tie and Break Records in Successful Season

We won! Hours of tense and grueling practice do pay off. The H.H.S. Track Team has proved this by ending their season with a 5-1 record in the conference and by breezing through the State Association Meet held at Davidson College with a first place rating. The Tornadoes were able to gain points in every event, thus adding a trophy to the case and pride to the school.

At the State Association Meet, the H.H.S. cindermen were soaring with energy. With the determination not to return to Hickory empty-handed, the thin clads rose to victory. Terry Sims put the icing on the victory cake by setting a new state discus record of 143 feet.

Under the capable coaching of Frank Barger, the team added to their accomplishments many honors and much self satisfaction.

Appearing to be a hero out of the Greek olympics, Terry Sims demonstrates his championship form.

Tennis Team Records 2-5 Season Despite Determination

Despite the efforts of the H.H.S. tennis team they posted a 2-5 losing record for the '62 season. The final season's figures totaled two wins over North Mecklenburg, two losses to Elkin and Shelby, and one loss to Garinger.

Top racketman, Mart Lipe, sparked the team into action, backed by seniors Buzzy Frye, Rodney Whitney and John Abernethy. Johnny Bason, Dick Havnaer, Louis Duncan, and Kathryn Hemphill completed the squad.

Unique this season was the fact that for the first time a girl joined the ranks. Sophomore Kathryn Hemphill was the only girl who practiced regularly with the team.

The capable supervision of coach Jack Daughtery, plus the invaluable experience gained this year, will be of tremendous benefit next season.

Mart Lipe is no ballerina, but he finds that a fast game of tennis really keeps him on his toes, while serving a ball into the back court.

A firm hand and golfing skill result in a par score for Conrad Fritz in a match with Morganton.

Coach Jim Garrett's golf team opened the season by defeating North Wilkesboro, Lenoir, and Lincolnton by scores of 9-3, 7-3, and 6-3, respectively. However, after beginning the season with a good start the team lost three consecutive meets to Morganton, 6-3; Lenoir, 8-2, and Marion, 8-1. After these defeats, the H.H.S. clubbers finished the remaining part of the season with victories over Shelby, 5-4; Marion, 6-4; and a tie with Wilkes Central, 5-5, ending the season with five wins, three losses, and a one tie record.

Outstanding players, Farell Hunt and Richard Allison, led the team in scoring. They were backed by Chuck Turnbull, a junior. The golfers closed the season by placing fifth in a field of fifteen teams in the Western North Carolina High School Athletic Association meet.

Most Influential Leaders of the Class of 1963 Are

With so little time for relaxation, H.H.S.'s Most Intellectual seniors, Hugh Robertson and Jo Bumbarger, take time out for an informal jam session.

"Getting away from it all," Margie Hoke and Gary Nicholas forget school books, clubs, dances, and show what fun it can be to be chosen Most Athletic.

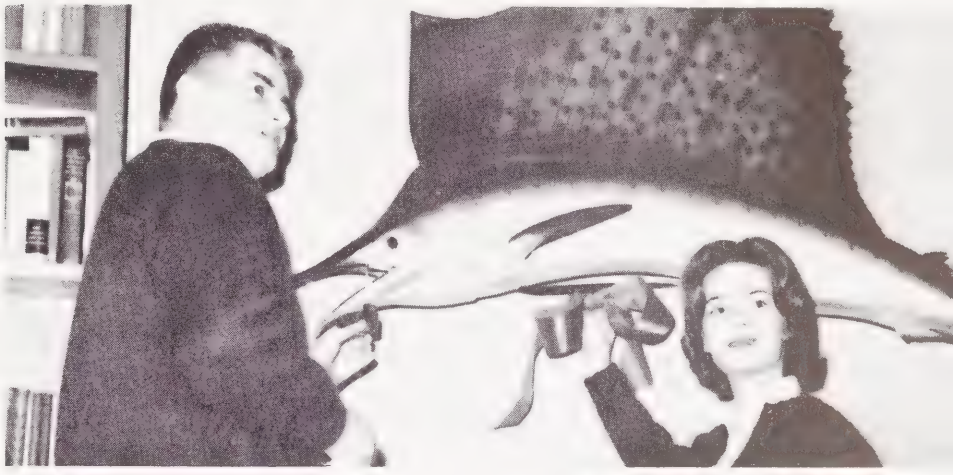

Laden with the symbols of their Versatility, Bill Sherrill and Ida Lee Wilfong each smile at the person who can be depended upon to get most anything done—and well—at H.H.S.

Named to Senior Superlatives by their Fellow Students

"Sure c'mon I'll be glad to give you a ride," Tommy Deal says to hitch-hiker Penny MaDan, the other half of Hickory High's Friendliest twosome.

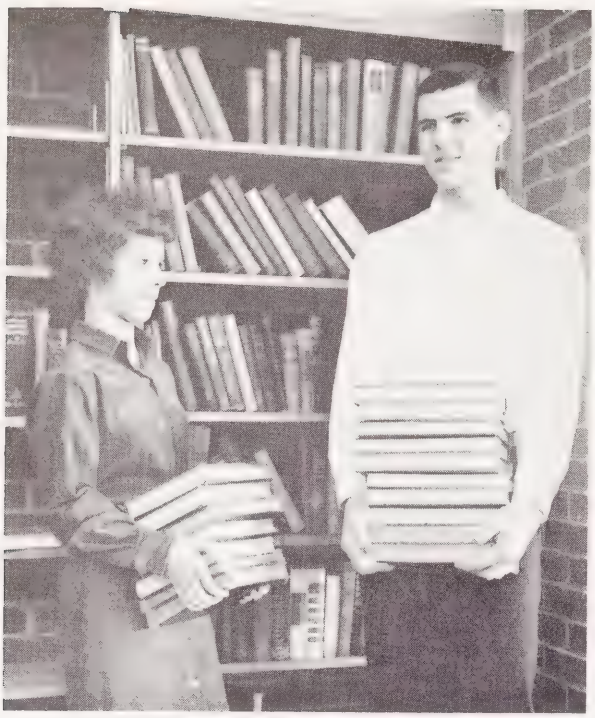

Steve Lail and Renie Wysong, Wittiest, decide that the way for a sailfish to enjoy Christmas is with a cigarette and red bow.

The ultimate in elegance, Jane Abernethy and John Keever, Best Looking, are out for an evening.

Outstanding Seniors Enter Superlatives' Hall of Fame

Volunteering for hard work and thriving on it, has earned Robin Cilley and Charles Murray the title of the school's Best Citizens.

"I may be Most Likely to Succeed, but not at this game," Baxter Linney concedes to Becky Cromer who also wins this vote of confidence from seniors.

Know-how and planning aid in giving the title of Best Dressed to Johnny Bason and Rene Clark.

"When your home phone's ringing off the wall, the best way to plan a party is to seek the seclusion of a public phone booth," state Linda Hamilton and Paul Bock, Most Popular.

Under the table is not their usual position, but when Johnny Guthrie proves his supernatural powers by an eclipse of the sun, panic breaks loose in King Arthur's court.

Katy Aderholdt rehearses her lines before the play as she nervously applies her stage make-up.

Twain's Hilarious Comedy Is a Huge Success at H.H.S.

With ludicrous intention, Southerners turn Yankee to present Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court." Weeks of preparation by actors and stage hands proves worthwhile as the audience roars approval.

Shocked while tinkering with an old radio, Frank, played by Johnny Guthrie, suddenly finds himself in the seventh century where he receives a skeptical reception from Arthur and his court. Equally astonished by the strange personage, Arthur's consulting magician, Merlin, portrayed by John Summers, is confronted with a threat to his magical authority.

Frank establishes his supremacy and proceeds to modernize the kingdom. A flaw appears in his master plan when Katy Aderholdt, Arthur's crafty sister, attempts to overthrow his domain. Frank outsmarts her and untangles the comic webs before he is returned to reality.

Problems never cease when a play is presented; John Summers waits as two members of the cast have trouble removing his beard.

Miss Linda Hamilton

MISS HICKORY HIGH

Even beauty has its burdens and Jane Abernethy, Homecoming Maid of Honor, carries home her share of school work.

Expressions of joy and curiosity, dignity and interest register on the faces of sponsors and escorts as they await the half-time ceremonies.

Football Gives Way to Royalty at Homecoming Half-time

Linda Hamilton expresses mild disbelief at the announcement that she is Homecoming Queen.

Soon to be crowned Hickory High School's 1962 Homecoming Queen, Miss Linda Hamilton began her illustrious promenade down the football field as the expectant crowd watched in hushed admiration. The sponsors with their escorts and Maid of Honor, Jane Abernethy, waited respectfully as Linda advanced to the platform where her coronation was to take place.

With a crown and a kiss from Paul Bock, Student Council president, Linda officially began her reign over the remainder of the Homecoming activities. As she assumed her place of honor, her sparkling eyes and unforgettable smile seemed to thank the student body for the honor bestowed upon her.

Defeating the opposition, the Hickory High School football team created a festive atmosphere which made the "September in the Rain" dance a memorable occasion for many. Amidst glittering umbrellas and cascading rainbows, the weekend was brought to a grand finale as students happily danced to the music provided by the "Tams."

Carrousel Princess

A pretty face and a winning personality made Jane Abernethy the logical choice for Carrousel Princess. Representing Hickory High at festivities held in Charlotte, Jane rode in the Carrousel Parade on Thanksgiving Day. Climaxing the fun-filled weekend was a grand ball held at the Coliseum.

Winning Combinations of Character, Scholarship, and

Girls' State

Their interest in public affairs and the principles of government gave Anne Mitchell and Ida Wilfong the opportunity to attend North Carolina's Girls' State Conference.

Boys' State

President of the Young Republicans' Club and interested in politics and civic affairs, Baxter Linney was selected as Hickory High's delegate to Boys' State in Raleigh.

Kathy Cline was chosen as 1962 Girl of the Year on the basis of former elections as Prettiest, Carrousel Princess, and LOG Editor.

Junior and Senior Miss Hi Misses

To the senior and junior girl whom the students select as having the best combination of personal attractiveness, leadership, and scholastic ability is given the honor of Miss Hi Miss. This year Ida Lee Wilfong and Nina Gregg were chosen. With the title goes the right to represent Hickory High at a gathering of some two hundred girls from North and South Carolina at Winthrop College.

"Queen of Hearts" Themes

GAIL STEVENSON, Runner-up

Dimmed lights, hushed audience, and forty-four of Hickory High's most charming girls began the 1962 Beauty Contest. These girls, each a representative from a homeroom or club, carried out the theme "Queen of Hearts" with royal gowns and heart-shaped sceptors.

Throughout the evening, the unnerving pauses for elimination were eased by music and dancing skits. The Quill and Scroll Society used the profits for the expenses of their banquet and the awards to be given during the dinner.

As the night progressed, tension mounted until the ten finalists were announced. Pandemonium broke with its mixed emotions of disappointment, joy, and relief. The announcement eased the tension, but within the next few days, was resumed as pictures were taken, retaken, and sent to Warren Beatty, contest judge.

Anticipation grew until Twig headlines shouted, "Sylvia Brown — 1962 Beauty Queen, Gail Stevenson — Runner-up."

Even at night, H.H.S. is rarely empty and quiet, for the hustle and rush of the day often remain till the late hours. This extension of daytime clamor is frequently transformed into the romance and color of school dances.

Throughout the school year, these festive occasions convert the complexion of the gym from the sentimental feeling of the Valentine's Dance to the hill-billy hilarity of the Twirp Dance. For each dance certain students are elected to reign over the activities. In order to create different moods, the locations are also changed from the casual atmosphere of the gym to the more formal surroundings of the Moose Club.

With much effort from the student body in both helping to plan these affairs and making them a success by attending, the school dances are made not only exciting events of the present, but happy memories for the future years.

...they have all the fun. Here, at the annual Twirp Dance, students enjoy themselves by doing the Twist.

Decorating, Dreaming, Dates, and Dancing Are the Year's

Jon Nixon and Mary Anne Fritz, King and Queen of Jr.-Sr., enjoy their last high school dance.

Beaming smiles of Yako Ito and Steve Lail typify why they were chosen "Boy and Girl with the Most Christmas Spirit."

H.H.S. provides its own entertainment at the Sock Hop. "Moon River" is featured by Hugh Robertson and Frank Richards.

Bright Spots at H.H.S.

During the Valentine's Dance, the "Deltas" do one of their specialty numbers.

Mixing work with pleasure, John Abernethy smokes his pipe as he finishes decorating for Jr.-Sr.

At the Twirp Dance, Albert Kiser and Becky Miller capture the prize for "Clemmiest Couple."

Close harmony by the "Continentals" adds zest to the Thanksgiving Dance.

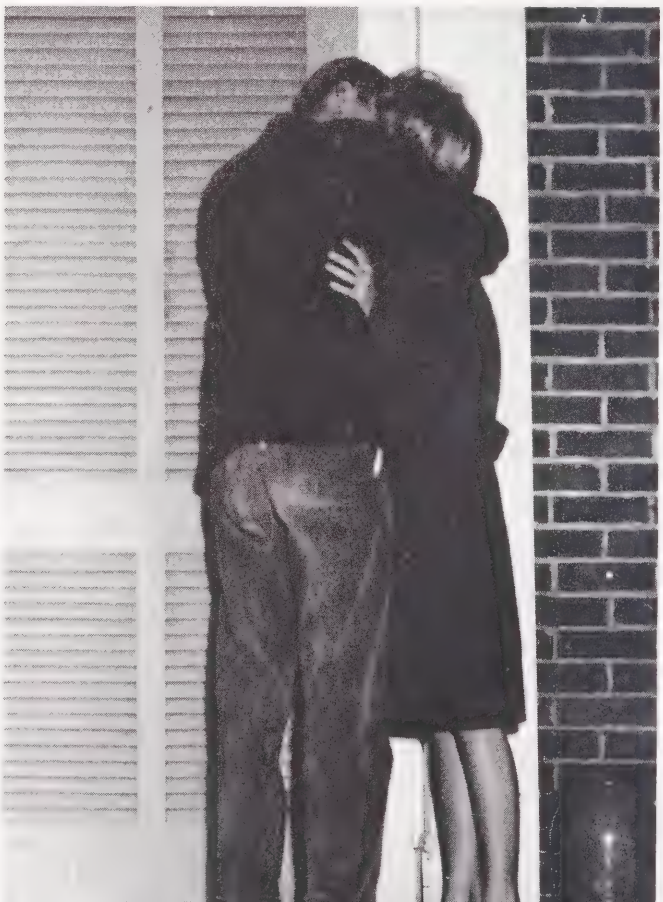

Climaxing her reign as Homecoming Queen, Linda Hamilton leads her court in the first dance of the evening.

Twirp and Sock Hop Bring Out "Clems" and Costumes . . .

Reminiscent of the Charleston their parents did forty years ago, the Twist has become the dance craze of 1963's teenagers.

The good-night kiss is typical of teen-age romance at H.H.S. or any High U. S. A.

Onlookers at the Valentine's Dance gaze in awe as Larry Johnson glides under the limbo bar.

Dutch Treats Are in Vogue

Yako Ito, A.F.S. exchange student, expresses the thrill of doing the Twist for her first time with Doug Rhymes, future A.F.S. ambassador.

"Memories are made of this." The Thanksgiving Dance, held at the Community Center, is one of the year's high spots for Linda Lockman and Wayne Baker, an H.H.S. couple.

Paul Bock explains the vital role which Student Council plays in the management of school affairs to A.F.S.'er Gaye Karlidag.

Actively interested in sports, Gaye Karlidag listens intently as her American brother, John Clark, teaches her the fundamentals of basketball shooting.

Hickory High's A.F.S. Exchange Students Couldn't

"Oh, I understand," a familiar phrase, is typical of Ulku (Gaye) Karlidag's rapid transition from the customs of her homeland to the trends of America. Characterized by an effervescent personality and bubbling laugh, Gaye has quickly fallen into the pattern of a typical H.H.S.'er. She erases her language handicap through diligent study habits. Unused to extracurricular activities in her Turkish school, Gaye is able to gain an insight into the mechanics of an American high school through serving on the Student Council.

A native of Ankara, Turkey, Gaye has become a member of the John A. Clark family since her arrival in Hickory before Christmas. Through her quick adaptability to American life and readiness to accept others, she demonstrates that mankind can one day live in peace.

Much more appetizing than the famous Turkish coffee is Gaye Karlidag performing a folk dance in the red, green, and gold silks of her country.

Yasuko Ito, Hickory High's A.F.S. student from Shimabara, Japan, represents her native country as one of friendly warm-hearted people. Despite her difficulties in understanding English, she chose to leave her culturally rich homeland for one year to sample the American way of life. American parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Hemphill, and their four children have made Yako a part of their family.

Yako radiates warmth and friendliness with her sparkling smile, which almost causes her almond eyes to disappear. Cheerleading, unknown in the Far East, has become her first love. Yako's natural grace has made it easy for her to learn the intricate routines required of cheerleaders. A member of the French and Sub-Junior Woman's Clubs, Yako has conformed to our world of Weejuns and madras.

Yako Ito puts down her twirling Japanese parasol to pose for H.H.S.'ers who rarely have the opportunity to see this Americanized A.F.S.'er in her native kimono dress.

Be Better—East Meets West in Duplicate this Year

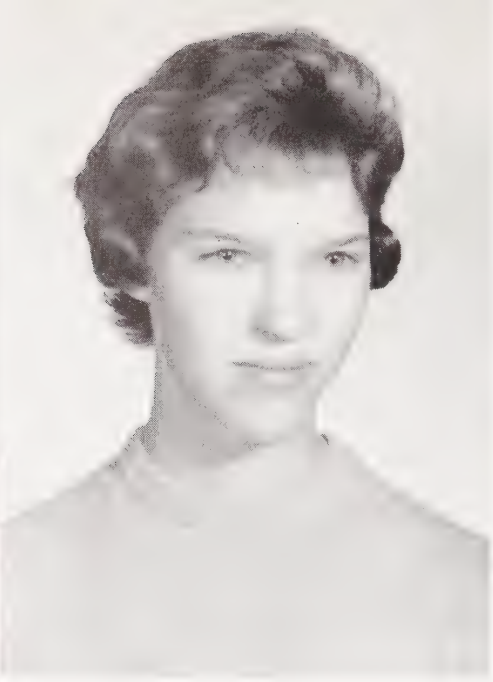

Fascinated by Yako's enthusiasm, Todd and Ellen Hemphill are entertained by her Oriental-influenced pep and cheers.

An industrious student in every class, Yako Ito enjoys working on a new skirt in home economics.

Hickory High Faculty Selects You! 1963 Who's Who!

As the year reaches its end, seniors move toward fresh objectives; behind them they leave the results and memories of their achievements and contributions. Each year the ten most outstanding graduates are recognized for their abilities in varied fields. Through secret ballot, the faculty elects these seniors on the basis of personal character, achievement, and their contributions to Hickory High. In this way, honor is bestowed upon these well-rounded persons who through scholastic and extracurricular activities better the standards of H.H.S.

With extreme pride, the faculty and student body reserve these pages for those seniors who are leaving an aura of glory on the school, and adding a bright ray of distinction and more sprightly personality to their high school class.

Chief Marshals Charles Murray and Becky Cromer check their sashes before the graduation exercises.

In the solemn atmosphere of Baccalaureate, Dr. W. W. Williamson gives graduating seniors a farewell to high school and briefs them on their challenge in meeting adult life.

Expressing a pang of sadness added to joyful pride, Buzzy Frye says good-bye to high school.

To some, the occasion is a solemn one; others disclose sighs of relief that it is finally over. Yet, to all who participate, the meaning of the graduation ceremony is basically the same—a significant step toward adulthood has been taken. From the stage, where each one is awarded his diploma, their lives move into a thousand divergent paths.

Even though the name "Class of 1962" may not be remembered any longer than previous graduating classes, to each senior who was a part of it, the occasion will remain firmly committed to memory. Repetition will bring to mind the numerous rehearsals. A humid and seemingly unbearable May evening at P.E. Monroe Auditorium will perhaps add another dimension to the memory. Likewise, the grey costume of graduation, which did more for pride than comfort, will no doubt be long associated with the event.

Now, the last bulb has flashed, the last proud parent has left, and the seniors "A through Z" have made their final exit.

School End in the Dignified Rituals of Graduation Ceremonies

Michael Cummings, Steve Lail, and John Finger lapse into bored silence at graduation rehearsal.

Nancy Lacky reads a recipe to Patti Clarke at a graduation party as others await the outcome.

Zeigler, Francis Marion

Setting sun brings the close of day, so graduation ends the year and high school life of each senior.

May 29, the End and Beginning

Through the doors of their alma mater, seniors leave the protection of H.H.S. for the last time, and move into unknown sunshine and shadows.

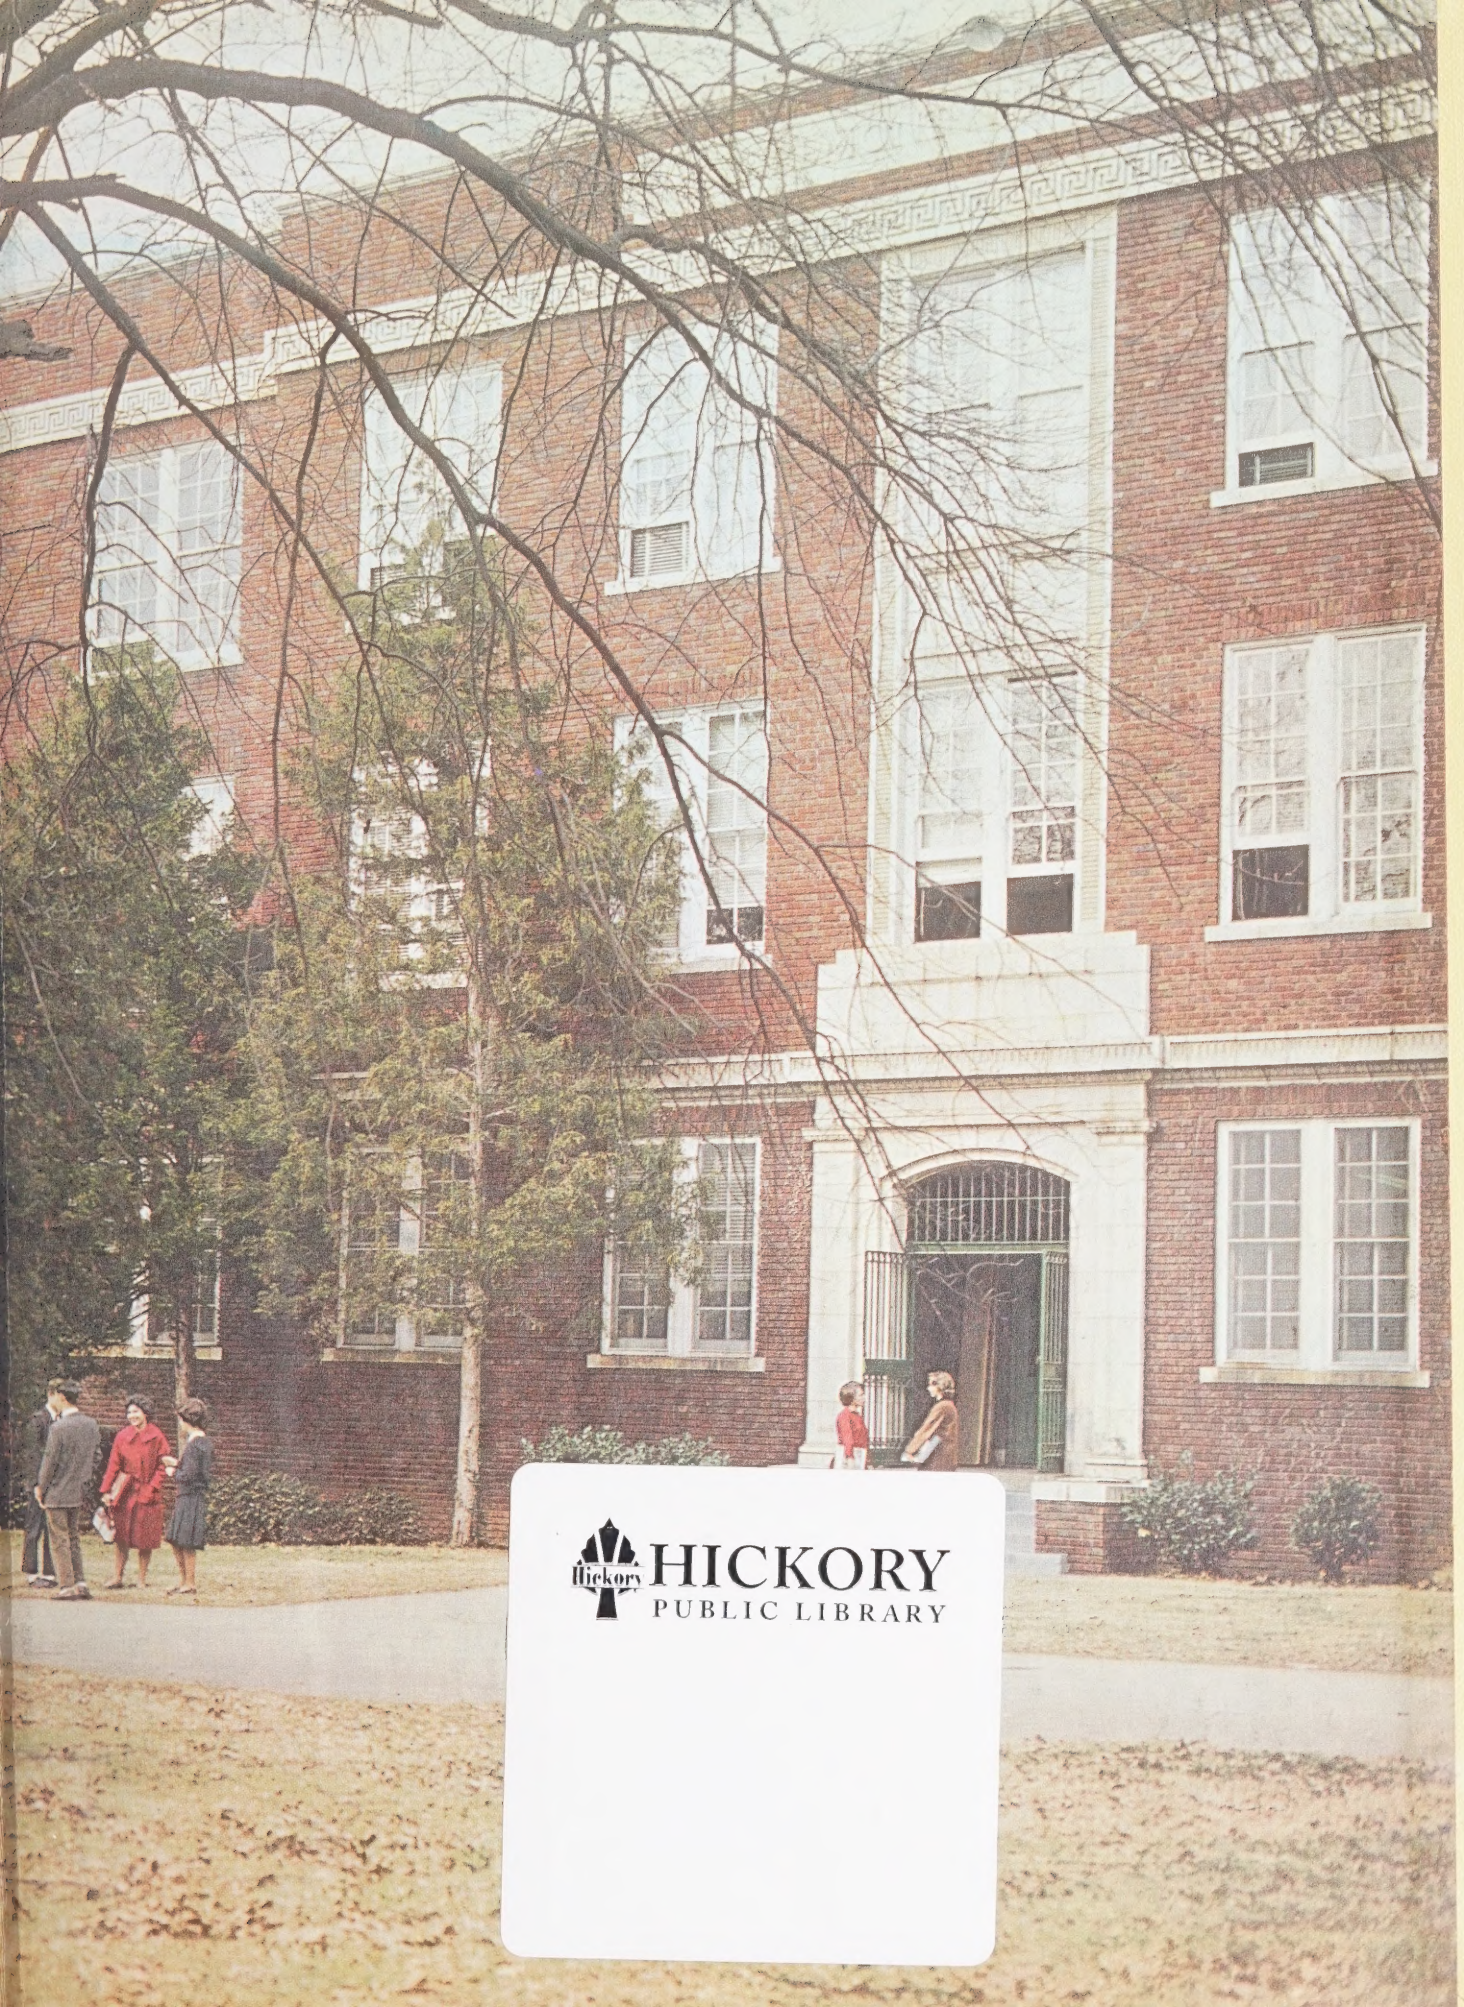

To the Hickory Log staff the 1963 theme of sunshine and shadows truly lives, not only from constant association with the book, but also from its own trials and tribulations, successes and thrills. Both business and editorial staffs have worked with an outstanding spirit of cooperation and selfless dedication. Editors Martha Hendrix, Rene Clark, Jean Benfield, Betty Knight, Craig Summers, Roger Link, Kathy Pritchard, Billy Clarke, Margaret Gwin, Patsy Brewer, and Totty Spencer receive a special vote of thanks for sharing the vast responsibilities. Another immeasurable thanks goes to Mrs. June Summers and Mrs. Doris Sigmon who have been on continuous "call," and listened to any problem. Without the patience of Mr. Cottrell, teachers, and fellow students, this book could not have been published, despite the untiring efforts of the staff. Thanks for understanding the requests, and joining in the cooperative efforts.

Heavy-eyed from lack of sleep, it is a weary staff who "puts the Log to bed." The editors journey to Charlotte, laden with the product of innumerable hours of work, which enable them to proudly and hopefully present to you the 1963 Hickory Log. It is the staff's hope that the "sunshine and shadows" of each student are captured in these pages.
